Wooden Rifles For Drilling Units Sought in Drive

"Victory Trainers" — exact wooden and metal copies of Springfield rifles used by the army—will be used by the Marion Rifles, one of the city's civilian group taking military training, if a drive now under way is successful.

Lieut. Col. George D. Hildebrandt, in charge of the civilian training program, decided to equip the unit with "real" rifles several weeks ago. His plan received a setback when army officials were unable to furnish any rifles.

Mindful of the current shortage in arms but realizing the imminent need of some type of "arms," he conceived the "wooden rifle" idea.

Marion businessmen and interested persons have already subscribed for 69 rifles. Hildebrandt seeks 150 or more. "Guns" of the type to be purchased cost $2.50 and are manufactured by a Cincinnati sporting goods firm.

Persons wishing to participate in the drive may do so by contacting Lieut. Col. Hildebrandt at his office at 139 East Church street or by phoning 3176. Other officers of the training corps, a unit of the Marion civilian defense council, also are taking subscriptions.

At present more than 150 youths have signed up and are training in the student division. About 250 are participating in the cadet unit and nearly 100 have enrolled in the senior unit.

Lieut. Col. Hildebrandt said in the beginning all units will share use of the guns, but it is the goal of the corps to "arm" every man.

Bond and Stamp Sale Soars to $82,078

Sale of defense bonds and stamps in Marion county last week amounted to $82,078.75, according to a weekly report of the Marion county bond and stamp committee.

This total was the second highest week reported. The total for the week ending Jan. 17 was $132,371.40.

The total sale for the preceding week was $23,560.55.

Marion Joins Nation In Observance of Army Day

Marion joined today in the national observance of "army day" on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the nation's entry into the 1914-1918 world conflict. The local American Legion post will sponsor two radio programs tonight.

In many Ohio cities and throughout the country there were displays of the country's military might, both men and the machines of war.

Col. John P Huling Jr., army ordnance representative in Marion, expressed pleasure at the display of flags in the business and residential sections.

This morning an army plane swooped over the city several times and then headed southwest. The visit was believed to be in connection with flights of army planes over Ohio cities in observance of the day.

Broadcasts Set

Bird-McGinnis Post No 162, American Legion, will sponsor two broadcasts tonight over Station WMRN in observance of the anniversary.

Fort Hayes notified the post that if possible, an army representative would be sent to Marion for the program.

The tentative program calls for reading of the preamble to the Legion constitution by E. M. Breithaupt, commander of the post, and interviews with Marion men who have served in their country's armed forces.

The group to be interviewed will include George T. Geran, William R. Martin, Police Chief W. E Marks, T. E. Kinnear, Carl Kay, Jewell Ralston and Mr Breithaupt.

From 8:30 to 8:45 W E Orcutt and a member of the radio station staff will broadcast a question and answer program on the quartermaster corps. The program, prepared by the war department, has particular appeal for parents of young men already in service, Mr. Orcutt said.

Military Parades

Planes and ack-ack (anti-aircraft) guns, jeeps and artillery, troops from the field and local defense units carrying hunting rifles—these were in the line of march in various cities.

The state house grounds in Columbus bristled with military equipment. Airports at Cleveland, Cincinnati and Dayton displayed bombers and pursuit ships. At Dayton, too, were a pair of Japanese planes shot down during the Pearl Harbor attack and a German Junker 88 bagged over England.

Gov. John W. Bricker, Maj Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis, Fifth corps area commandant, and Col A. B. Warfield, commander of the Columbus general army depot, reviewed the capital's parade.

Cleveland's Euclid avenue parade was climaxed at public square with the induction of 125 volunteers into the army air force and 75 selectees into the army. A total of 1,700 troops with 300 pieces of equipment went to

Marion Churches Draw Throngs To Easter Services

The spiritual urge that comes in times of stress, combined with the finest Easter weather in years filled Marion's Catholic and Protestant churches for all services Sunday.

A general survey this morning showed that attendance was considerably more than in recent years and one church reported the largest Easter attendance in its history. Several churches opened Sunday school rooms and put in extra chairs to accommodate overflow crowds. Two of the larger churches reported attendances of more than 1,000.

Three hundred and fifty-two persons attended the sunrise service at the Harding memorial, the

According to [illegible] received at Wellston, Lieutenant Davis and two other [illegible] from Langley Field, Virginia, left Friday night on a special mission. Sometime between Friday night and Saturday morning the three planes ran into difficulty and were forced down in a North Carolina swamp, not far from the Virginia-North Carolina border and on the edge of the Great Dismal Swamp.

The two other pilots came out of the swamp, notified authorities and have been assisting in the search for Lieutenant Davis. The desolate and uninhabited nature of the area has impeded work of the searching party.

Planes which flew over the site of the accident sighted the Davis plane, plunged into the swamp and partly buried it. It is not known whether Lieutenant Davis attempted a parachute drop, but if he did and was successful he undoubtedly would have been able to reach help by this morning, in the opinion of his brother.

Parents Come to Marion

Mr Davis came to Marion Friday night on business and was at Hotel Marion when Mr Abele called him from Wellston yesterday. Mr Davis immediately got in touch with Mrs Davis who was in Youngstown visiting her family, and she came to the Marion. And on her arrival yesterday Mr Davis said they would remain at the McAndrew home until they receive an official communication.

Lieutenant Davis was sent to Langley Field last week on special assignment after duty with a pursuit squadron stationed in Baltimore, Md. His wife, the former Miss Ann Abele of Wellston, is at their home in Baltimore. She talked with her father yesterday.

His summer vacation employment while he was in college included work as a reporter and sports writer on the Wellston Daily Sentinel.

Lieutenant Davis has a sister, Doris, now Mrs William H Patterson of Springfield, O.

300 BOMBERS BLAST NAZIS

Industrial Centers in Germany and Near Paris Under Heavy Attack.

By The Associated Press

The Germans, gathering their strength for the battle of Russia, were struck last night by one of the largest task forces ever marshaled by the RAF—more than 300 bombers, and it was reported concurrently that British troops (presumably commandos) had assaulted them Norwegian flank.

Cologne, a Rhineland center of German war industry, and an aerial engine works near Paris were the principal targets of the RAF night-raiders with their 1,000 tons of explosives and incendiaries.

It was the 105th raid on Cologne.

During an hour and a half in which German anti-aircraft batteries outclassed the Paris region with fire and steel, the RAF smashed bombs into the Gnome-Rhone works at Gennevilliers, about three miles from the German-occupied French capital, which the British said had been turning out engine parts and other material for the Germans.

The Germans declared that only light damage was sustained in the Paris region and "some traces of damage" and casualties in "isolated sections" of western Germany.

Attack on Narvik

Stockholm heard that British troops apparently a commando force, raided the Narvik area of German-held Norway last Friday night supported by planes. Explosions could be heard on the Swedish side of the frontier, which runs close to the coast in that far northern area, almost touching the inner reaches of Ofoten fjord.

The authoritative London estimate that if the RAF used more than 300 bombers last night was

DELAWARE TO HAUL WORKERS IN BUSES

Tire-Saving Plan Worked Out for Transporting Men.

Special to The Star

DELAWARE, O., April 6—Plans are virtually completed for bus transportation by bus of Delaware area war production workers to their jobs in Columbus plants.

The plan has trips to and from Columbus every eight hours, was formulated by the Delaware Chamber of Commerce and Supt. L. F. Carlisle, director of the Delaware training school. Leo Wilson, head of the Chamber of Commerce committee, said the plan was originated for workers who want to save automobile tires.

Charles Snively, Delaware garage owner, has purchased two school buses and will start the service as soon as enough workers sign up for the transportation. Each bus has a 50-passenger capacity.

D. W. Gibson, local rationing coordinator said the bus service would answer a serious problem. Although tires ostensibly are available to war plant workers, allocations of only a few tires a month in the county assures tires only to physicians and other highest rated eligibles, he said.

The order also prohibited the use of chromium in heating pads and curtailed the use of rubber, nickel and electrical resisting materials, and limited the length of cords on home pads to 5 feet.

CEYLON BATTLE BRINGS ENEMY FORCES NEARER

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, April 6—Japanese bombers carried the war to India proper today by raids on two coastal cities north of Madras, the British announced officially. The planes were based on an aircraft carrier, operating with a Japanese task force in the bay of Bengal.

By The Associated Press

The battle for India shaped up today as an expanding contest by earth, sea and air on the approaches to that rich festive empire and as a duel of propaganda and diplomacy marked by United States intervention and Japanese threats of invasion.

Louis Johnson, President Roosevelt's personal minister to India, held explanatory talks with India's native leaders in what was widely believed to be injection of United States influence to settle the problem of making India free but yet a bastion for the United Nations.

Johnson, newly arrived, conferred at length with Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, respectively past and present presidents of the All-India Congress party.

Whether he had yet delivered President Roosevelt's letter, of undisclosed contents, to some as yet unidentified Indian leader was not known.

No Decision In Burma

While the Tokyo government spoke of crushing British forces in India, along with the whole British empire and the United States, the land fighting in Burma continued without decisive turn and the axis repeated threats by sea close to India's frontiers—a flaying at Akyab, Burma, and bombardment of Colombo, Ceylon.

On other fronts, Australia's position was officially described as much safer, despite roundabout Sydney reports of additional small Japanese landings in the Solomon islands on Australia's northeastern sea flank, and on the Bataan front in the Philippines the enemy had been stopped again, dead in his tracks.

Imperial headquarters at Tokyo announced that naval units had been battering at Colombo, Naval base-capital of the large British-owned island, since Saturday and had inflicted heavy damage.

It was possible that the announcement meant only an attack by carrier-based planes, which the British already had turned into a stinging defeat with 57 of about 75 attacking planes destroyed, probably destroyed or damaged.

Informed sources at London said they had no information that Colombo was under warship attack.

Quote Tokyo Radio

The German radio ostensibly quoting an official Tokyo announcement said also that Japanese troops had made a surprise landing at Akyab, a port of western Burma, within 100 miles of the Indian frontier, more than 1,000 miles across the great bay of Bengal, northwest of Ceylon.

A Chinese spokesman erroneously reported last week that the Japanese had landed at Akyab.

In all, Japan had lost at least 91 planes destroyed or damaged in week-end operations, including those of the Australian theater.

Taking no chances on the supposition that the enemy had been stopped in his invasion plans for Australia and now was concentrating on gaining position to strike India, Australia extended emergency control regulations to Thursday islands and all islands in Torres strait within 100 miles of the northeastern mainland.

The regulations gave the MacArthur command power to act swiftly in an emergency, such as an invasion attempt based on the Japanese lodgements in New Guinea, which borders Torres strait on the north.

Port Moresby, the New Guinea capital which still stands as a defense bulwark against such a thrust, was raided just before noon today, but the Japanese mustered only seven bombers for the fighter-escorted raid. No damage or casualties were reported.

Australia's air minister, Arthur

One U. S. Air Squadron Destroyed 39 Japanese War Planes in Java

By CLARK LEE

U. S. ARMY HEADQUARTERS, AUSTRALIA, April 6—A single U. S. army pursuit squadron christened "the Hell-Benters" destroyed 39 Japanese planes for certain and 26 other "probables" in fighting over Java, it was disclosed Saturday in the squadron's official diary.

The Hell-Benters, now in Australia, destroyed 20 Japanese navy "Zero" fighters, 14 heavy bombers, four "97" dive bombers and one fighter of the German Messerschmitt type.

The other 26, raising their bag to a total of 65, were listed as probably destroyed only because positive confirmation had not been obtained since most of the fighting was over the sea. In addition, many other Japanese planes—exact number unknown—were listed as destroyed on the ground.

Squadron Leader Killed

The squadron commander, Major Charles A. Sprague, was killed in one dog-fight, but American losses were described as comparatively light.

The official account employed terse, colorful phrases rather than the restrained language of official reports.

"Another dull day," he wrote as a Japanese fighter was destroyed; and in another place, "we loosed a lot of lead poison at Charlie."

Lieut Col Lloyd Leeuba, in reading extracts from the diary, remarked, "these men sure love to fight."

One ace of the squadron is Lieut William J. Heinan of Minnesota.

In one engagement over Bali he shot down three Japanese and declined to take credit for destroying several others seen to fall.

In another action he helped to shoot down four of six enemy planes.

Others of the squadrons credited with two or more kills each are Lieutenants J. E. Kesler, Joseph J. Kruzel, Nathaniel H. Blanton, G. Mahoney, Ben S. Irvine and James Moorehead.

On one flight Moorehead dived through a formation of seven Japanese and shot down two, including the leader.

Several Americans had been forced to bail out of bullet-torn planes but all landed safely and rejoined their unit.

The diary recorded that Lieut. Frank Adkins parachuted to a Java beach only 200 yards from where several hundred Japanese soldiers were landing from barges.

Escapes on Bicycle

As the Japanese opened fire, Adkins sprinted across the beach and overtook a Javanese native on a bicycle. With bullets zinging about his ears, he hitch-hiked a ride on the handlebars, but the native couldn't pedal fast enough, so they changed places.

Pumping breathlessly, Adkins reached safety only to note that the native was gone.

"I must have lost him somewhere on the way," the flier explained.

The squadron's biggest action was in combatting a massed air and sea invasion force heading for Soerabaja. In this action 60 Japanese transports were listed as heavily damaged and another convoy of 30 ships and barges off Rembang was broken up.

It was after this that the American group was nick-named the Hell-Benters.

Several pilots said they had heard reports from natives that the Japanese were using women fliers but said they had found no such evidence in wrecked Japanese planes.

DAVEY URGES FAITH

By The Associated Press

A method has been developed in England for manufacturing rayon from seaweed that is less expensive than methods now in use.

M'NARY BACKS PROFIT LIMIT

G. O. P. Leader Comes To Support of Ceiling on War Production Earnings.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 6—Senator McNary of Oregon, the minority leader, swung powerful Republican support today behind senatorial efforts to write drastic limitations on war profits into a $10,212,000,000 military appropriations bill.

Declaring he would support any workable scheme to cut off excessive profits in military production plants, McNary said he was confident other Republicans in the senate felt the same way.

Special significance was attached to McNary's statement of the minority viewpoint, since a profit limitation proposal approved Saturday by the appropriations committee was scheduled to be presented to the senate today in such a way that a two-thirds vote might be necessary to attach it to the pending military bill.

Striking down a flat 6 per cent limitation previously approved by the house, the senate committee voted to authorize the presentation of a comprehensive amendment under which industry would be allowed profits ranging from 10 per cent on the first $100,000 of war contracts down to 2 per cent on all above $50,000,000.

While the house provision was limited solely to future contracts to be made on funds provided within the bill, the senate committee decided to broaden the proposal to include all war orders, past, present and future, except those on which the government already had made final payments.

Likewise, Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky said he thought the amendment was satisfactory, although Senators O'Mahoney (D-Wyo) and Overton (D-La) made known their intention of offering a substitute, which the committee rejected Saturday by an 8 to 8 tie vote.

The substitute proposal would leave the responsibility of fixing final profits with the war and navy departments and the maritime commission, which would be authorized to renegotiate contracts on which they found excessive profits were being made or excessive costs charged.

Once the profit limitation feature is settled, the senate is expected to give speedy approval to the huge appropriations bill carrying $17,434,000,000 for the army and $1,634,000,000 for the navy in addition to minor appropriations for other departments.

NO FARM CROPS TO SPOIL THIS SEASON

Ohioans Told Labor Will Be Provided.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 6 — No Ohio crop will spoil this year for want of men to harvest it, despite a labor shortage compelling farmers to make raw recruits efficient hands in "three easy lessons," and employment official said today.

Wade Hammond, state director of the U. S. employment service, said his organization would "meet the demand for farm labor required under increased production quotas by tapping every available source of manpower and calling in the women where they can help."

"We can't supply all-round farmers such as in previous years," he declared. "But farmers themselves are one of the most adaptable groups and are able to make satisfactory help out of the men we send them in three easy lessons."

Hammond commented that some of the high school and college students, the part-time workers and men from the cities may have to be told "which side a cow is milked from, but the farmers are up to the teaching job."

Of the 262,000 Buckeye farmers queried on labor requirments this season, 19,672 have replied that they will need one to four men to help plant or harvest crops to feed the allied nations, Hammond reported.

"While this preliminary report is illuminating and gives us advance warning of the size of the task before us, it also serves as a challenge to the people of Ohio," he asserted. "The farmers of Ohio have accepted the responsibility for increasing their production as a part of the food-for-victory campaign."

STEEL PLANTS BOOST OUTPUT

Other Ohio Factories Also Report New Records for Production.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, April 6—Reports of new records in Ohio plants of two steel companies are among the examples cited by the war production board to show the gathering momentum of production drives backed by labor-management committees.

Plants of 308 companies in which the committees have been formed have notified the board of their campaigns to boost output, and many of them "report large increases already," said a statement issued here by the office for emergency management.

This report came from "Bill Johnson and Joe Gividen, of the war production drive committee of the Middletown (O.) division of the American Rolling Mill Co.":

"At midnight March 31 all previous monthly production records in the history of this 31-year old steel plant were smashed by blast furnace, open hearth and blooming, bar and strip mill departments. Blast furnace made 1,000 tons more pig iron than any previous month—open hearth produced 3,600 more tons of steel than the best past month—blooming, bar and strip rolled 6,000 more tons of ingots. Men did a grand job in spite of scrap shortage and lighter and poorer scrap. We promise not only to meet these new peaks in the future but to beat them as 1942 unfolds."

Republic Steel Corp. advised the WPB that labor-management committees were being organized in its plants and that it was operating 168 hours a week.

Republic reported an all-time record tonnage of pig iron in March, and continued.

"Our Warren, O., blast furnace produced what we believe to be an all-time world's record for blast furnace production in any one month — 41,351 tons. We broke our all-time ingot production record for the corporation. We produced 75,496 tons of electric furnace steel, an all-time record," which the company said virtually equaled the "electric furnace ingot production for the entire country for 1937."

In March, said Republic, individual departmental production records were established "on our No. 1 blast furnace at Buffalo, our No. 3 blast furnace at Cleveland, our shops at Massillon, Canton, Buffalo and Gadsden, and on many of our bar mills, plane mills and other finishing departments that a complete list would appear almost fantastic."

Owens-Illinois Glass Co., Toledo, said it was establishing joint labor-management committees in a score of plants, and Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. said production drives are under way in 25 plants, each with a committee which will make individual reports.

What do I do?

—to keep spark plugs "popped up"?

The same thing happens to spark plugs that used to happen to the old oil-lamp chimney. After awhile they get coated with a heavy layer of black carbon. In that condition they can't give off a fat, hot spark any more than the dirty chimney could give good light. That means hard starting—extra wear on the battery—gasoline waste. From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

VERY OFTEN these days, I get to thinking about the soldier boys at camp. And the sailors, too.

What worries me is . . . what happens when they get a day off after working their heads off all week? They go to town . . . and what then?

What happens? The answer is . . . mostly nothing! Because most towns near army camps just don't have nearly enough entertainment facilities to take care of the soldiers on leave. So the boys just stand around, leaning against lampposts or sitting on doorsteps. And sometimes, the local townsfolk find themselves wondering what's changed the town . . . instead of pitching in to help the boys have a good time in decent surroundings.

In many towns, however, the situation is better. Many towns have nice, community places where a soldier can go sit down and "chew the fat" and enjoy some cake and milk, or maybe a good glass of beer. The boys like that. And they're not likely to get in trouble . . . because common sense tells you nothing can be wrong about a couple of glasses of beer.

There's another reason, too. The beer industry is cooperating with the army and with the law-enforcement officers to help keep the places where beer is sold, clean and decent. The brewers don't want their beer sold to soldiers in places where bad conditions exist . . . and they're right.

Seems to me that we Americans ought to get together and see that everything we can to make things pleasant for the boys who are in training. They're doing their duty . . . maybe we have some duty, too, in this direction.

There are lots of ways of helping. We ought to support them all. All of us have our part to play in winning this war . . . and making life a little easier for the boys in camp is something we all can do something about.

SHOW BOAT GIRL

By ROBERTA COURTLAND

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Dolores!

The game room attendant let her into the room, not quite rudely, but she brushed past him and stood for a moment looking swiftly about her. Then she saw Randy. He was at the far table, bending his dark head above a woman sitting there with a stack of chips before her.

The woman was blonde; her evening gown was smart and very revealing. And as she lifted her head, laughing up at Randy, a pain seemed to close suddenly about Melissa's quivering heart and squeeze it until every drop of warm, life-giving blood contained in it was squeezed out.

For the woman above whom Randy bent with such devoted interest and admiration was Dolores.

Through the shock and pain and distress deep within her had come to him, Randy straightened and looked at Melissa, across the crowded room their eyes met and held. Melissa saw Randy say something to Dolores, and saw the lovely blonde head, and heard Dolores' laugh, which was triumphant and derisive and which lashed at the younger girl. And then Randy came swiftly across the floor to Melissa, his face set and stern, his eyes cold.

"I thought I told you to stay out of the game room," he said harshly, and took her by the elbow, turning her about, guiding her toward the door.

"I'm sorry," Melissa stammered faintly. "But I wanted terribly to see you—"

"Was it so important it couldn't wait?" asked Randy as he guided her down the stairs to the moon-swept deck.

"I thought it was," said Melissa shakily. "And then she cried out sharply, "Oh, Randy, Randy—why are you hurting me so? What happened this afternoon isn't important—not to me—"

"It's important to me," said Randy grimly. "It opened my eyes to a lot of things. I've been doing some pretty tall thinking ever since. I'm afraid there's been some unpleasant gossip going the rounds about you and Jimmy Marston."

Melissa caught her breath, staring up at him, wide-eyed, white-faced. "But I told you, darling, about Honey Stevens' visit—what she told me—"

"I know, but only you and Honey Stevens know that. Maybe it is the truth — I wouldn't know," answered Randy grimly. "The point is that to the general public, as much of it as is represented by the people who come here, who are our customers, who pay the expenses of the River Queen—you're a soulless, brazen little hussy who drove a fine young fellow to his death. And they seem to want no part of you."

Melissa stood with her slim back against the rail, her mittened hands outstretched on either side, clenched about the wood so that the frail delicate lace mesh of her mitts was strained to the breaking point. She couldn't manage words; speech was beyond her. That Randy, her dearly beloved, Randy who had held her close and hard in his arms only a few hours before should be saying such cruel, callous things to her seemed unbearable.

The Contract

"By the way," asked Randy after a tense, rather dreadful moment, "I saw you at the table with a customer just now. Who was he? What did he want?"

"His name was Beasley," said Melissa, and found it very hard to get the words past the agonizing pain that tore at her heart. "He wanted to offer me a radio contract."

"Radio, eh? Well, that's wonderful — congratulations!" said Randy swiftly.

His back was on the moonlight, his face in shadow so that his expression was lost to her. She could only guess at it, as she stared at the pallid oval that was all she could see of his face.

"When are you leaving?" he went on, and Melissa's heart fell straight into her little black strapped slippers.

"I told him I wasn't interested," she stammered faintly.

"What?" barked Randy, as though he couldn't believe that he had heard her correctly. "A radio offer — and you turned it down? Are you crazy, girl? Where is he? I'll find him and tell him you've changed your mind—"

"I told him that I was going to marry you and stay on the show boat," she said very faintly.

Randy had turned away from her. He paused now, turned away so that she could no longer see even the pallid oval of his face. There was a little tense moment of utter stillness, and then he said curtly, "Oh, yes—I meant to tell you—I—ah—I'm afraid that we're going to have to alter our plans a bit, Melissa."

She held her breath, waiting, one small hand clenched about her heart as though by that pressure she could ease a little of the pain that burned like a live coal there.

"Yes, Randy?" she said at last very low, her voice stricken and very faint.

"Don't make me feel any more of a heel than I know I am, Melissa," said Randy shortly. "After all, marriage for a man in my racket is a fool's game. I should have realized that. As a matter of fact, I suppose I did, only I was trying to kid myself along. You're pretty and cute, and—well, I guess I lost my head for a bit. But I seem to have both feet on the ground now—"

"Is that why you brought Dolores back to the boat?" asked Melissa quietly, her voice a sick, dead thing.

"The truth is, Melissa," said Randy grimly, "Dolores belongs here, and you don't. I've been wondering how I'd tell you. I couldn't simply heave you off the boat and bring Dolores back, and of course, I couldn't have both of you here at once. But now this radio offer for you—why, it's the perfect solution. You'll go into New York and make a career for yourself on the radio, and Dolores will come back to the show boat, and everybody will be happy."

She caught her breath on a little sob. Happy! She'd never be happy again! She'd never know joy and delight and gladness again. Her heart was broken. That was what that awful pain there meant—

Randy said suddenly harshly, "Well, don't just stand there. Say something, can't you?"

"There—there's not much to say, is there?" whispered Melissa piteously.

Randy stood very still, almost rigid for a moment and then he said roughly, "I'll find Beasley and tell him you've changed your mind."

Melissa turned, her shoulders sagging a little, one hand pressed hard above her aching, frightened, bewildered heart, and crept, like a sorely wounded animal, to her stateroom.

It was all over; the lovely dream of love; the perfect idyll toward which her every thought and emotion had been turned since that black night on the Point when she had found Randy on the path and had helped him to the cabin.

Parting

There was no sign of Randy at breakfast. Melissa, her eyes dark and bleak, great circles of fatigue and grief marking the night of weeping through which she had gone, drank half of a cup of coffee and refused anything else. As she left the dining-room, one of the game room attendants said gently, "The boss wants you, Melissa—he's in his office."

For just the merest breath of a moment hope rode high in her eager heart. But the moment she opened the door in answer to Randy's voice, her heart dropped sickly and the tiny, new-born hope withered and died painfully. For Randy was pale, his face set, his eyes stern and cold.

"Good morning, Melissa," he said formally, as if never in all his life had he held her close and hard in his arms and kissed her as though he could never have enough of her kisses. "I've got your contract here — and it's a darned good one. I threshed out all the details with Beasley, and you're to report to him in New York on the fifteenth. That will give you five days. You'd better arrange to go in town this afternoon; one of the boys will take you in the station wagon."

Melissa said nothing. She couldn't.

He looked up at her and then swiftly away, and went on rather hurriedly, "Not that Beasley is going to let you get lonely. Mrs. Beasley is going to see to it that you meet some nice young people—"

He unfolded the contract. "If you'll sign here, I'll get this off to Beasley and you'll be all set. And then pride and all the other emotions that had tried to keep her silent melted, and she cried wildly, like a hurt, frightened child. "Oh, Randy, Randy — what's come over you? Don't you—don't you love me any more?"

There was a tiny, tense pause. Randy did not turn. His hands were sunk deeply into his pockets, and his face was turned to the morning visible through the window.

"I'm sorry, Melissa," he said after a little, and his voice was colorless, cold. "I'm afraid I never did—not the way you wanted me to. You're cute and appealing and all that, but I'm not the man ever to be tied down to marriage. I'd hate it—and maybe some day I'd even hate you."

She was crying now, as a child cries—her lower lip caught between her teeth, the tears sliding down her white face, while she made no effort whatever to check them, to wipe them away.

Randy took out his handkerchief and touched her face with it, wiping the tears gently with a hand that shook a little. He said on a sharp, agonized breath, "Oh my darling—don't! Don't!" But the next moment he had jerked away from her.

Clark Lee of AP Sheds More Light on MacArthur's Trip to Australia

[illegible] stated Dean [illegible] covered the fall of Manila and who for more than two months reported the defense of Bataan in dispatches which were known as "The Best of the War," produced only [illegible] to Australia [illegible] the Philippines.

Lee left Bataan some time before Gen. Douglas MacArthur made his now famous trip to Australia to take over the allied military command on that continent. He arrived in Australia four weeks after MacArthur. But Lee's account has covered [illegible] the high lights of the trip.

In the following dispatch Lee, ever, he sheds fresh light on the conditions under which MacArthur [illegible] and some of the staff [illegible] journey through waters [illegible] by controlled by the Japanese.

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA — For military reasons the story of our trip from Bataan peninsula to Australia has been delayed and even now the details cannot be published but as a matter of fact the journey was rather uneventful and the highlight was congratulating General MacArthur today and hearing the story of his trip from members of his staff.

We knew when some days ago we heard by radio of his arrival in Australia that he must have left Bataan with great reluctance and only because he believed that by doing so he could better serve the Philippines and the whole allied cause.

Calls in Bulkeley

When it was finally reported that he would have to leave, MacArthur called in that bold buckaroo, Lieut. John D. Bulkeley, motor torpedo-boat commander, and asked if the lieutenant could take him through.

Bulkeley looked squarely at MacArthur with his cold green eyes and replied:

"On the nose, sir."

Bulkeley thought, so the general discovered later, that the assignment was to run through the Japanese lines all the way to Australia in his tiny but tough boat.

The general made clear that their destination was an island in the Philippines and asked Bulkeley if he could make it through waters in which the Japanese were attacking shipping.

"Can do, sir," Bulkeley answered—and it is history that he did, although the journey was difficult.

MacArthur is delighted with the cooperation he has received in Australia and is as confident as ever that the Japanese can be stopped and crushed.

Just before he left the Philippines, he staged several attacks which pushed the Japanese back a considerable distance on Bataan.

These blows were combined with an attack on Japanese ships in Subic bay by MacArthur's midget but ingenious air force.

Sink Five Ships

His aviators rigged a bombing device onto their planes enabling them to dive at targets with fairly heavy explosive loads. They caught 10 ships in Subic bay and sank five of them, including an 18,000-ton transport on which it was estimated that 6,000 Japanese soldiers were killed.

The Japanese were heard at that time to complain bitterly about "MacArthur's unfairness in sending planes to bomb and machinegun soldiers swimming helplessly in Subic bay and not carrying weapons."

Our trip was tame compared with MacArthur's.

Melville Jacoby, correspondent for Time and Life magazines, and his wife and I left Bataan for reasons which still cannot be disclosed except to say that the journey definitely was not an escape from the war we had seen since its first day and in which we had developed the sincerest admiration for MacArthur and his Filipino and American soldiers, whose gallant cause we believe is still not lost.

We hope to return to see them reconquer the Philippines.

Report Fair Business on Boston Wool Board

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, April 6 — The Commercial Bulletin said of the wool market today:

"A fair business has been done this week, generally on the basis of the OPA ceiling prices. Mostly, of course, the business has been in the way of options against the gigantic government order on which bids were opened Thursday. Business on civilian account is very moderate.

"Activity in the west has been scattered and small, with prices very firm. Growers are inclined to hold for higher prices than the eastern buyers can afford under the ceilings.

"Foreign primary markets are not especially active.

"Mohair continues inactive with prices hardly changed."

The newspaper published these Ohio quotations:

Domestic fleeces—Delaine unwashed 45-48; ¼ blood combing 45-47; ⅜ blood combing 51-52; ¼ blood combing 51-52.

NOTICE to all Milk Consumers
As a war-time measure to help extend the life of tires, Marion milk distributors will adopt a system of DAYLIGHT DELIVERIES, COMMENCING WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8.
Customers are asked to cooperate by leaving a note with empty bottles put out tonight, indicating how much additional milk they will need on Tuesday to care for their household needs until the milkman appears at a later hour Wednesday.
By starting our routes after daylight your milkman will be able to DELIVER AND MAKE THEIR COLLECTIONS IN A SINGLE TRIP, instead of back-tracking over the route for collections as is now done.
Daylight delivery of milk was practiced in many cities before the present war-time emergency, but is now being generally followed because it reduces the wear and tear on tires and trucks, which can no longer be obtained.

Miss Lois Peterson and R. L. Morgan Married in Church

MRS. RICHARD L. MORGAN

EMANUEL Lutheran church was the scene of the formal wedding Saturday evening of Miss Lois Kathryn Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernhard Peterson of 601 Summit street, and Dr. Richard L. Morgan, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Morgan of 618 Girard avenue.

Vows were exchanged at 8 o'clock in the presence of a large group of relatives and friends.

The single ring service was read by Rev. M. E. Hollensen.

White gladioli, iris, calla lilies, sweetpeas and feverfew filled the brass altar vases. On either side of the altar were tall white satin covered standards holding arrangements of the flowers and from the bouquets fell garlands of greenery and white blossoms. Tall white candles lighted the altar decorations, which were banked by huckleberry trees dotted with white flowers. Garlands of white blossoms and ferns marked the pews reserved for the families.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore the wedding dress worn by her sister, Bernice, at her marriage to H. A. Petrich. The ivory lace redingote over heavy cream satin was made with a tiny tailored collar. It was buttoned down the front to the waist, where it parted to reveal the gleaming satin and fell away into graceful folds over the long satin train. Her lace veil, held by a tiara of pearls and orange blossoms, was finger-tip length in front and extended the length of the long train of the bridal gown. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies and white iris and wore a double strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Petrich, and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Donald Jones and Miss Joan Boyd, were in lime green taffeta gowns made with bouffant skirts, puffed sleeves and sweetheart necklines, and wore pearl necklaces, their gifts from the bride. Their Juliet caps were covered with yellow daisies. The matron of honor carried a crescent shaped bouquet of token roses and gerbura and the bridesmaids' flowers were crescents of yellow daisies and yellow iris.

Dr. Morgan's best man was his brother, David K. Morgan. Dr. J. F. Smyth, Dr. A. E. Morrison, Mr. Petrich and Don Williamson were the ushers.

Mrs. William Ackerman Jr., organist, and Mrs. Richard Jennings, vocalist, presented a half-hour of nuptial music preceding the ceremony. Mrs. Jennings sang DeKoven's "Oh Promise Me," "Because," by D'Hardelot and "I Love You Truly," by Bond. Mrs. Ackerman's selections were "Andante Cantabile," by Tschaikowsky, "An Easter Spring Song," by Edmundson, "Liebestraum," by Liszt, "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life," Herbert, "Con Sentimento," by Rogers and "Estrellita" by Ponce. She played the traditional Wagner and Mendelssohn processional and recessional matches and while the vows were being exchanged she played softly "All For You" and "The Lord's Prayer," the latter by Malotte.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Peterson chose a gown of crushed rose chiffon and lace with a matching picture hat and wore a corsage of soft yellow roses. Mrs. Morgan was in light blue chiffon with a small hat of a matching shade, and wore a corsage of pink roses.

One hundred and seventy-five guests attended a reception in the ballroom of Hotel Harding after the ceremony. Assisting were Mrs. Jennings, Miss Martha Mouser, Miss Pauline Stannard and Miss Louise Guthery.

Appointments for the buffet refreshments were in all-white. The large tiered wedding cake was placed on one table and at the serving table there was an arrangement of candles and flowers. Bouquets of flowers decorated the large room.

When Dr. Morgan and his bride left on a week's trip through Michigan the new Mrs. Morgan was wearing a light blue dress and coat. Her hat, shoes and purse were of redwood shade and she wore white gloves. After April 11 Dr. and Mrs. Morgan will be at home at 370 South State street.

Friday noon the bride gave a luncheon at Hotel Harding for her bridal party. Thursday evening the best man and ushers gave Dr. Morgan a party at the hotel with Dr. R. T. Morgan and Mr. Peterson as guests. Dr. Morgan presented his attendants with initialed tie and collar clasps. On the preceding Saturday evening at the hotel Dr. R. L. Morgan gave a party for his ushers, the best man and Donald Jones and Richard Jennings. After the dinner the group went to the David K. Morgan home on East Center street for a social evening.

Mrs. Morgan for the last two years headed the speech department and was an English instructor at Harding High school. A graduate of Carleton college in Minnesota and Purdue university, she taught in the East Canton schools before coming to Marion. She is a member of the Marion Association of University Women.

Dr. Morgan, now serving as Marion county coroner, is a graduate of the Ohio State university college of medicine. He interned at Toledo City hospital and last fall came to Marion to practice. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta social fraternity and Phi Chi medical fraternity.

25 Years of Experience

THE United States has had 25 years of experience since it declared war on Germany the first time. It has learned a lot.

Most of the important lessons have been crammed into the last few years, some of the most important ones into the last few months. For instance, the United States knows better now than to underestimate the Germans or any nationality schooled to think the German way, chiefly the Japanese.

Unfortunately, this lesson wasn't learned in time to avert World war II, which now plainly is nothing but World war I continued after a 24-year armistice. During the armistice, the Germans prepared to resume the war and bring it to a successful conclusion. The United States and its friends marked time, stewed about such momentous matters as whether or not every person was entitled to a mule and 40 acres or two cars in every garage and prepared to get their cars knocked off. They know better now. They are trying to make up for lost time. The gamble in the war is whether or not they can do it. The Germans and the Japanese, who counted on that very thing, are betting their shirts it can't be done. The United States, Great Britain and their allies are betting their shirts it can be done. Some of the allies, the Netherlands, for instance, and Poland and Greece already have lost their shirts on the bet.

Another thing the United States has learned since April 6, 1917, is not to underestimate the Russians. On April 6, 1942, it looks as though everything depended on them. Either they hold Germany this summer or someone else will have to hold them—and there isn't anyone else. In World war II as in World war I, Russia is the key to the outcome. It is no wonder Adolf Hitler hates everything about Russia; it spoiled Kaiser Wilhelm's plan of conquest and it threatens to spoil his. A lot of ideas about Russia are being revised—except the one fixed idea that any nation which takes its goodwill for granted is asking for an unpleasant surprise.

But chiefly what has been learned in 25 years of experience is that peace cannot be had for nothing. If the United States had spent one-tenth as much money and effort on averting war as it is going to spend on winning it there wouldn't have been any war. It wouldn't have been helpless when Germany tried to knock out the British. It could have done something about France, except wail. It wouldn't have been set up so prettily for the Japanese sucker punch at Pearl Harbor. But Americans liked to think that peace was so wonderful no one would break it. They liked to think they were giving peace a boost by refusing to stand guard over it. The whole thing—now that peace has been destroyed—seems about as sensible as sending a note to the burglar: We trust you, pal, so please use the back kitchen window.

Most of these lessons, no doubt, will get lost again in the confusion of the next few years. The world has been accumulating experience for the last 'teen thousand years and still doesn't have enough to help it much. But if only one thing can be salvaged, it will represent a net profit. If only the United States can realize that it is potent enough to have the kind of a world it wants after it has kept the Japanese from having the kind of a world they want!

How's That Again?

SYMPATHY hereby is extended to the war production board. It is going to need a lot of it after one or two more muffs like its interpretation that even home-made cuffs on trousers are banned.

Specifically, what does the board propose to do about Abner Highwater, who wears his pant legs up to here, with plenty of sock showing? Abner also prefers cuffs. So what does he do?

He steps into the store and buys a pair of pants. The salesman urges Abner to try on the pants for fit. He orders them made up without cuffs, normal length. Abner takes them home, gets out his needle and thread and builds himself what is known as a French cuff, which doesn't take much material. No one has lost a thing, and Abner has cuffs on his pants. Just let someone try to get harsh with him and he's going to fight the case all the way to the supreme court. War or no war, this is still the United States—a country where Abner Highwater is entitled to as much as the next fellow for his money and can do with it thereafter what he pleases, even if it means showing his bare knees.

READY-MADE BUILDINGS.

Prefabricated buildings of sturdy construction which can be easily shipped, quickly assembled and are of types suitable for housing troops in varying climates have been developed by the Corps of Engineers.

Several thousand of the ready-made buildings already have been purchased by the War Department for quartering troops where permanent construction is not necessary or feasible. Erection of prefabricated units will not replace methods of constructing large cantonments of a permanent character. The prefabricated buildings are approximately twenty feet wide, from forty-eight to 100 feet long and accommodate twenty to forty men each. They are of all-wood or wood and steel construction. —Engineering News Record.

No Treasonous Implications Seen in Standard Oil Company Rubber Deals.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 6—A fair picture of the charges of rubber treason against Standard Oil [illegible] publicly disclosed and [illegible] Truman committee [illegible] the following resume [illegible]

[illegible] rubber on which [illegible] soil in the future [illegible] the process which [illegible] obtained from Hitler's I. G. Farben.

[illegible] manufacture of the synthetic rubber in anything like the amount needed was started only after the war began.

[illegible] evidence as to why it was not started sooner can be twisted [illegible] to blame almost anyone.

You can blame Standard on the [illegible] that its early offers to the government were not ardently pursued because it wanted royalties.

You can praise Standard, if you [illegible] because its officials were ahead of the government in [illegible] a probable need for synthetic rubber.

You can blame the Japs for not letting us they were going to cut off our eastern supply of natural rubber.

You can even blame Roosevelt because his previous inclinations were against breaking off relations (by starting synthetic production) with our friendly (now allied) British-Dutch rubber monopoly—a break which would have plunged Java and the East Indies into economic depression and thus have laid another carpet for the Jap [illegible] on.

You can blame Jesse Jones for not having pressed the matter to any sudden conclusion, although he is supposed to have a memo from the White House in his possession [illegible] not to offend the British and Dutch by his rubber activities.

Or you can blame the limitations of human vision for not having permitted anyone back in 1940 and 1941 our state men, our big business men, congress, or the nation, including the Truman committee [illegible] to appreciate fully what a rubber problem was in store for us after last Dec. 7.

What Hitler Got

Standard, in this case, seems to have been a big international business concern, looking out for its own interests, but in a way short of treasonous implications. It did not get the worst of its deal with Farben. The synthetic rubber patent it gave Hitler is for a cheaper but less efficient method than the one it got from him.

The Butyl process it gave will not be used much as long as natural rubber cakes are available upon which to build Buna tires. No expert eye is needed to detect the great difference between them. You can mark the soft Butyl tire with your hand.

Tests indicate it is good for only 10,000 miles at 35 to 40 miles an hour. It may be manufactured now for civilian use, but the army will not want it, as long as it can get Buna.

Du Pont has a synthetic rubber which will make a better tire than either, but it costs much more and requires the building of more facilities, and hence may not be widely used.

Standard also obtained from Hitler the process for synthetic toluol, a base for TNT. One army official told the Truman committee our prospects for TNT production would be only one-fifth of what it is today, without Sid process.

The evidence does not yet show if Standard gave away its process for synthetic gas, which now would be very valuable to Germany, but it does show Standard collected about 2,000 German processes for whatever it gave.

No politician would care to be caught saying a good word for Standard, because it is not good politics, but the bad words hereafter are likely to concern other matters than its rubber deal with Farben.

Committee's Actions

For good words for Standard can be offered, in fact, as it was looking out for itself. It did come to the national defense advisory council of the government as early as July or September 1940, and thus apparently roused the ire of Edward Stettinius and W. L. Batt in the synthetic rubber problem, and Batt urged Mr. Roosevelt and Jones to get busy because the Japs might some day cut our Far East rubber supply.

Needless [illegible] lagged a year or so before Jones authorized money for four plants. Apparently Standard wanted 3 per cent royalty but now has finally accepted a consent decree giving up its claims to royalties for the war period which entails loss of the money it has spent.

In dealing with other private business on the matter, Standard apparently was mainly trying to freeze out Goodrich and some of the other competitive patent holders.

There is some ground for the committee supposition that it did not lose its profits consciousness entirely until investigators from the Truman committee started calling around and asking embarrassing questions—possibly at the behest of Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold who was trying to squeeze Standard into accepting a consent decree abandoning their royalty claims.

The threat of this publicity may have brought Standard around faster than the threat of the anti-trust law.

Life in the Navy

Except in Battle, Life Safer on Ship Than on Shore.

"Unless engaged in actual combat, the navy man is much safer on his ship than he is when ashore on liberty," Lucius Johnson, M. D., Captain, M. C., United States navy, Pensacola, Fla., declares in the April issue of Hygeia, The Health Magazine. "The diseases and accidents in the civil community are a far greater menace to his health than are the machines, the explosives and the living conditions on board his ship.

"During the first century of its existence, drowning cost the navy more lives each year than any other cause, but for the past few years, motor vehicle accidents on shore have far exceeded all other causes of loss of man power."

Under the direction of the surgeon general of the navy, Captain Johnson says, the medical department exercises a benign supervision over the health of the sailor throughout his service career. Its mission has been stated this: To keep as many men at as many guns as many days as possible. Its one purpose is to get healthy men and to keep them that way.

"A surprising amount of time, trouble and treasure is devoted to guarding the navy's health," the captain explains. "On board ship, the doctor regards the care of the sick as his principal job, but he is also the public health officer and has the responsibility of detecting and correcting insanitary conditions. The galley, the barber shop, the laundry, baths and toilets, the galley where the food is prepared, the clothing of the men, the cleanliness of bunks and living quarters are his constant concern.

"On a warship the air is carefully controlled in its temperature and humidity. Its amount and rate of flow are so regulated as to be healthful. Water for drinking and bathing receives equal attention. The clothing of the men has been carefully studied in its relation to their health. Even their amusements and recreation are considered as activities which may have an important bearing on their well being. All of these are a part of the navy doctor's cosmos. A warship is essentially a movable gun platform, and other characteristics must be subordinated to this one. In spite of the limitations thus imposed, modern warships are healthful and comfortable homes.

"The death rate in our navy, despite its accidents, explosions, crowded quarters and the hazards of the sea, is only one quarter as high as that of the United Sates as a whole."

Daily Bible Thought

It is silly of men to set themselves against God. Yet we do just that when we disobey his moral laws, which are unchangeable as his physical laws: "It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers."—Isaiah 40:22.

War Atrocities Show Signs of Revival

Foreign Secretary Eden's Hong Kong Report May Set Pace.

THE war atrocity story, a fixture of World war I, has not been conspicuous in the United States in World war II. Two reasons are evident. First, total war itself, with its civilian bombings, is an atrocity. Second, the atrocity story showed an unpleasant tendency after World war I to backfire. Americans learning how they had been aroused by tales of unspeakable brutality that had little, if any, basis in truth, vowed never to be fooled again.

Most sensational atrocity report so far was made by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in a speech to the house of commons March 10 when he asserted that the British government had learned from eyewitnesses that Japanese forces in Hong Kong had bound 50 British officers and men and bayoneted them to death. While the report does not compare in grisly details to the tales that have come out of Poland, for instance, it gains strength from its official background. In England, it has had terrific effect, it has furnished the motive of revenge for British forces resisting the Japanese.

The Eden charges were denied promptly by a spokesman for the Japanese government, which indicates how serious they were believed to be by the nation accused. Lately, an increase in atrocity stories suggests they may be coming back to some of the favor they enjoyed during World war I. It suggests, also, that the history of the stories in that war may be duplicated history that shows most of the stories had no basis, that many of them had only a fragment of truth in them, that only a few actually occurred.

WHILE some atrocity stories have served a military use and others a political use, the larger number of them, true or untrue, have probably been used for both purposes. Perhaps the most widely known example of a war whose immediate cause was an atrocity story was that between England and Spain in 1739. An English smuggler named Capt. Jenkins was roughly handled when caught by Spaniards; he claimed on his return to England that his ears had been cut off. Sufficient popular feeling was stirred up over his accusation to bring friction between the two governments to a climax, and the ensuing conflict was known as the War of Jenkins' Ear.

Adolf Hitler had high praise for British atrocity stories in World war I and devoted a whole chapter of "Mein Kampf" to a study of war propaganda. German propaganda in the World war, he declared, was psychologically wrong because it was aimed at the intellect. British propaganda, on the other hand, "was aimed at the masses, thus ruthlessly and ingeniously securing moral steadfastness at the front even during the greatest defeats."

Atrocity stories served their most useful purpose in the other war through their influence upon the emotions of neutral populations. Most of them did double duty, because they also helped maintain morale among citizens at home and among members of the armed forces.

One of the most gruesome stories was the charge appearing in the British press in April, 1917, that the Germans were shipping trainloads of their dead to factories to be boiled down for use as lubricating oil. This story is credited with helping to bring China into the Allied bloc. More important, because their influence on neutral opinion was worldwide, were the two Bryce reports, one issued in May, 1915, covering German atrocities committed in Belgium at the time of the invasion, the other published by the foreign office as a blue book in December, 1916, covering the 1915 Armenian massacres. The reports had a tremendous impact on opinion in the United States, where Bryce had served as British ambassador.

Best remembered atrocity story, the shooting of Edith Cavell, was really not an atrocity story at all. Nurse Cavell was arrested in Brussels by the Germans in August, 1915, and charged with having aided Allied soldiers to escape to Holland. Miss Cavell admitted her guilt and was sentenced to death. The Germans refused to relent and went through with the execution, which was justifiable from their point of view. Had they possessed enough imagination to visualize the result, however, they would have realized it was to be an enormously expensive act for them. Public opinion throughout the world was embittered by what seemed an act of brutality, whether Nurse Cavell was guilty or not.

IT has been this aspect of Germany's national character that has made the anti-German atrocity story so useful. It is easy to pin such stories on the Germans because they make a tradition of ruthlessness in war. Aerial bombing, for instance, was their idea. All nations at war now use it, but Germany always will be despised as the inventor. Submarine and gas warfare were their ideas. In the present war, Germans lent themselves readily to the hatred that will be bestowed on any country that practices "slavery". Undismayed by the bad effect of shipping Belgians into Germany during World war I to work at forced labor, the Germans promptly did the same thing, this time with Poles and Frenchmen.

They are careless of public opinion, presumably, because they are fighting with the idea that when they are victorious they won't need to be concerned about public opinion. It is impossible to arrive at any other conclusion about their reasons for opening unrestricted submarine warfare against the United States in World war I, for instance.

Germans, of course, use propaganda at home to incite hatred and contempt among their own people. For 25 years their propagandists have been urging them to despise democracy. Hitler tries to poison their minds against their enemies by the canard that Great Britain and the United States are governed by Jews, who are his special propaganda foils. The Japanese are incited to hatred by race prejudice, much as Americans are encouraged to think of their Asiatic enemies as the "yellow peril."

Essentially, the atrocity story is nothing but an enlargement of the technique of personal abuse in discussions about individuals. The object is to make it appear that the antagonist is inferior, to the point of brutality. In this connection, it must be noted that one of the most potent atrocity angles used by the Germans is the fact that British and French have used members of the Negro race in their wars; to many Germans this seems to prove that their enemies are capable of extreme ruthlessness.

Many stories that inflame passions in wartime are likely to seem too unlikely to be worth listening to in peacetime, but it remains to be seen how much of the cynicism generated by post-war disclosures about atrocity stories will be carried into the coming trials of World war II.

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Wednesday, April 6, 1932.

Funeral arrangements were set for Friday in Cleveland for Charles L. LaMarche, 75, of Vernon Heights boulevard, president of the American Malleable Castings Co., who died Tuesday.

Hoke Donithen, Marion attorney, underwent the second operation in recent months at Grant hospital in Columbus.

Central Ohio Traffic club elected Dea H. Jones of Mt. Vernon president and set its spring outing for June 15 at the Mansfield Country club in its annual meeting at Hotel Harding. G. D. Sobers of the Marion Steam Shovel Co., was elected to the board of governors.

David S. Ingalls of Cleveland, spoke in Marion at a meeting arranged by the local Ingalls-for-Governor club. His talk was given at the Edison Junior High school and was given to a crowd of 300.

One hour after he held up the office of the City Loan Co. on West Center street and made away with $253, a Marion man was booked at police station for investigation in connection with the holdup. Police said they found $30 of the loot on the suspect and quoted him as saying he had given away more than $200, "some here and some there."

The Harding High school Girl's Athletic association was organized at the high school under the direction of Miss Rachel McAfee. The charter list of 25 members was signed.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Uhl of Washington, D. C. Mr. Uhl was a former Marion man.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Thursday, April 6, 1922.

Hope that the building industry would "clean house" without the necessity of government intervention was expressed by President Harding in a letter read at the annual banquet of the National Lumber Mfgs. association in Chicago.

A warning that poison in the guise of bonded liquor was the only thing available for bootleg purposes was issued in Columbus by Federal Prohibition Director Russel. He said persons who buy "bonded whisky" from a bootlegger in the Buckeye state are taking "awful" chances of death.

John E. Hopley, Bucyrus newspaper publisher, received a letter from President Harding in which he looked forward to the time when he might move out of the White House and resume his activities as a resident of Ohio.

Announcement was made that Pennsylvania passenger trains in future would stop 200 feet south of Center street at the covered platform instead of at the station in order to prevent trains halted in Marion from blocking the tracks of the Erie and Big Four railroads.

The Bay View Reading circle met with Miss Delma Elson of Bellefontaine avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Highland of North State street entertained the Midnight Euchre club.

Mrs. Frank Washburn was hostess to the Algonquin club at her home on North Main street.

Carl E. Danner was installed as exalted ruler of Marion Lodge of Elks, succeeding J. L. Price.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Thomas of near Mingo, former Marion residents.

San Fernando

By DAMON RUNYON

It's a Valley in California Stretching from Los Angeles North Toward City of Frisco.

LOS ANGELES—The San Fernando valley is heavily populated by former Broadwayites, including some ex-Follies and ex-burlesque queens, now matrons, who are in a peaceful state of enjoyment over the fact that they are not used in the ground, onions or otherwise.

The San Fernando valley is a wide pleasant area that begins at North Hollywood and muscles crandly between tall hills for a distance in the general direction of San Francisco, but never entirely escapes being Los Angeles, an inexorable fate that seems to befall much of southern California. It must be at least nine dollars worth of retreads from one end of Los Angeles to the other.

We have recently encountered a large number of old acquaintances from New York's "Rue Regret" who were unaware a few years ago that there was any human life or a thing on west of Polly Pickens' Princeton hotel, who are now happily ensconced on small farms in the San Fernando and proudly display their cussed dukes to show you they are tillers of the soil.

They migrated out here because of the high cost of needing performers, songwriters and the like, and that The San Fernando, which in its layout and architecture reminds us somewhat of the northern approach to Miami, Dade county, Fla., offers small home acreage at moderate prices, and the Broadway folks settled there and began turning the dirt like mad.

WE MEET them in a wayside establishment on Ventura blvd at Encino, conducted by a gentleman who calls himself just Jules and who dispenses cuisine of such high order as to be worth a long journey. We listen patiently to the recitals of a bucolic existence, which includes early bedding, early rising, speding the day in farm adventures with the wily chicken and all that sort of thing.

If you must know the truth, it sounds somewhat revolting to one who is strongly addicted to room service, but Jules' food makes the whole thing endurable. Besides, we were never one to encourage illusion. If folks find happiness in thinking country life beats leaning up against the mail box at 50th and Broadway and eating home cooking is better than Lindy's, it is all right with us.

Jules confided to us that the building in which his little restaurant is located was supposed to have been the headquarters of Murieta, the celebrated California bandit, who lived a long time ago. It is our opinion that Murietta's memory is frequently revived by the notion he had something of the George Washington habit of stopping over in every house he came to. We base this opinion on the number of places in which Murietta is said to have made his headquarters.

IF EVER he tarried in Jules' house, he was in not waiting for Jules to get there to take of his grub. We feel that the number of former Broadwayfarers we encounter at Jules' is a testimonial to his kitchen, but we are wondering if it is not also a slight reflection on the fodder the lads get at home. They all seem to eat heartily at Jules' even as they tell us it gives a thrill it is to raise your own garden sass.

Not to change the subject, but public life in the San Fernando has its problems, as a Broadway friend who is now an official in civic organization is one of the valley was explaining to us in Jules'. It seems a property owner in the town complained to the organization of a neighbor who is opposed to modern plumbing and maintained one of the old fashioned telephone booths in his back yard.

A special meeting of the civic body was called to consider this matter and after a long debate a committee was appointed to measure the distance from the booth to the complainant's house to see if it violated the local law of proximity in that respect. It seems that it did, and now the complainant is sore at the committee and so is the other guy. He thinks the members had no business meddling in his affairs.

A Vet's Lament

The writer of the following, dubbed "Old Sarge" by his Associated Press colleagues, served in the first World war as a member of the 101st infantry, 26th "Yankee" division, reaching France July 10, 1917. He fought through six major engagements, was wounded and awarded the croix de guerre with palm. He received a taste of the present war as a foreign correspondent, returning to the United States 11 months ago. Since Pearl Harbor he has tried to re-enter the armed forces but has failed because of reasons he outlines in the article.

NEW YORK, April 6—Today, the silver anniversary of the United States' entry into the World War one, many silver-thatched veterans of that campaign sit back in retrospect and wish they could turn backward in its flight.

Like the rest of the survivors of the [illegible] trious company of four odd million, this writer, yet unstreaked by silvered hair but definitely slowing up, turns back the years and recalls that fateful day.

Today—our silver anniversary—again we are at war.

It's sad to go on and on for years bolstering yourself to be normal physically and then, when the opportunity comes to prove yourself once a man as ever to find that you have every one in the medical lexicon from A to Z.

After my session with both army and navy doctors I felt as if in fairness to myself I should immediately repair to bed, order my own headstone through the Legion, choose my plot in the cemetery, call my daughter and tell her I had decided her to have the flag that drapes my coffin and then lay back and await death.

And yet, only 25 years ago, as a youth of 18 I could run the mile in about 5.10. Only 25 years ago and according to present day standards already on the shelf.

But, as we reminisce about the tolling of the military call 25 years ago many of us still [illegible] in pride as we see our sons answering the call their dads made April 6, 1917, before most of these lads, now carrying our banner against the same foe, were born.

Today is our silver anniversary but also a golden opportunity we are missing—because we are too old!

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET GROWING STRONGER

Reports It More Powerful Than on Dec. 7.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 6 — Lynn U. Stambaugh, national commander of the American Legion, in a statement here last night quoted a message credited to Secretary of the Navy Knox saying that "the Pacific fleet in ships, planes and men is even stronger than it was before Dec. 7."

The legion commander, deploring defeatism, complacency and rumor mongering, urged a return to "100 per cent Americanism," and asked that everyone demand proof of many rumors and "inside" stories relating to the war.

He quoted a statement from Rear Admiral Commander Ed Hayes, the navy's special assistant to Secretary Knox, which said:

"The navy department is aware of many rumors which have circulated about the Japanese action at Pearl Harbor, rumors so fantastic in some cases as to include the whispered statement that the Pacific fleet was completely wiped out. I am authorized by Secretary Knox to state for the first time that as of this date and for some time past, the Pacific fleet in ships, planes and men today is even stronger than it was before Dec. 7."

Stambaugh urged Legion members to assume leadership in the home war effort.

Shorter Skirts Defeat Purpose, Actress Says

By The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, April 6 — Short skirts, says movie actress Thelma Counts, are quite likely to defeat the purpose for which they supposedly are intended, viz: conservation of material.

"Short skirts and the new length hose simply don't go together," she ventures in the way of experienced opinion. "You bend to pick up your purse and the lisle top of your hose shows. So does the garter you have to wear, because you can't roll these new short length hose without them bulging. Shorter dresses mean pantie girdles, and that means more silk and rubber.

"I'm for the government plan of freezing present styles. Knee length is short enough and long enough and it will enable women to use their present wardrobe for the duration."

INDIA

Drakeford, said that the Australian air force was deployed over the most important areas under a new defense plan whose effectiveness, he said, had been illustrated by the mounting toll of Japanese planes.

Battle Near India's Shores

The attack on Ceylon brought the war within 40 miles of the nearest projection of the Indian mainland while India's leaders still dickered with the British over the defense control rider attached to the London offer of post-war dominion status.

The fortress area of Madras, capital of the province of that name is about 500 miles due north of Colombo.

On the Burma approach to India, Japanese patrols had pushed to Nyaungbinzeik, 15 miles north of Prome, on the western end of the British imperial-Chinese defense line.

On the eastern wing of the defense line, the Japanese were reported to have launched a small attack on the Mawchi-Toungoo highway, following the Chinese withdrawal from Toungoo. An official Chinese resume of the 12-day battle of Toungoo said that 3,760 Japanese were killed.

Tokyo issued a version of its own for operations against the Chinese in all war sectors from Dec. 7 through March, saying that 58,313 Chinese had been killed and more than 18,000 captured in 30 encounters, against Japanese loses of 2,536 killed and 6,382 wounded.

The Tokyo government turned fresh propaganda heat on troubled India.

A statement by Premier Hideki Tojo, said that "If India should remain, as before, under the military control of Britain, it would, I a matraid, be unavoidable in the course of our subjugation of British forces there that India suffer great calamities."

"British influence in India is now about to be exterminated," he added.

Tomokazu Hori, spokesman of the Japanese cabinet information board, chimed in with an assertion that it mattered not who obtains command of armed forces in India, the only way left is to crush that army."

Japs Reinforce Burma

The Japanese are reinforcing their already strong units in Burma, India's eastern neighbor, and are putting on the steam for a drive up the Irrawaddy river—a drive pointed directly at the rich oil fields of northern Burma and the gateway to India.

The Japanese are becoming more active in the Indian ocean and the Bay of Bengal, active enough to draw raids from United States bombers berthed in India.

The Japanese pulled off a "sudden death" aid raid on Ceylon, island flank to India, Sunday which turned into a boomerang and cost them possibly 57 planes destroyed or damaged.

The chief targets in the Ceylon raid were the harbor area and air fields of Colombo, Ceylon's capital, an dthe Ratmalana railway.

British reports said some bombs fell in the city but Vice Admiral Sir Geoffrey Layton, commander in chief of the armed forces in Ceylon, indicated no serious damage was done.

The Japanese, however, said heavy damage had been inflicted.

Invasion moves against Australia in full swing afte rthe conquest of Java and the Netherlands East Indies last month, appeared suspended, with offensive reports mainly confined to almost daily raids on Darwin, northern Australian port, and on Port Moresby, New Guinea port which the Japanese desire as an invasion base.

But United Nations airmen, active on the defense and offense, reported a wek-end bag of 20 planes definitely destroyed and 14 probably destroyed in air action over Darwin and Port Moresby and in attacks on Lae, New Guinea, and Koepang, Dutch Timor.

CLEVELAND TROLLEY CRASH INJURES 13

Two Cars Collide Head-on on High Level Bridge.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, April 6 — Thirteen persons were injured and nearly 100 others shaken today in a rear-end collision of two trolley cars on the Detroit-Superior high level bridge 196 feet above the Cuyahoga river.

Chief casualty was Motorman Charles H. Wendorff, 35. With a broken leg he was pinned for an hour inside the battered cab of his West 25th street car. Rescuers cut him free with torches.

Wendorff's car, bound downtown loaded with passengers, plowed into the rear of a stalled Lorain avenue car on the southernmost of four tracks at the center of the 501-foot span.

The conductor of the Lorain car, whose trolley pulley had left the wire, waved frantically at Wendorff, but Wendorff said he did not see the other car until it was too late to stop.

The impact battered in the cab of Wendorff's car, pinning him between the control box and the back of the cab. For an hour, the motorman was lodged in an upright position as rescuers cut away the heavy steel plates of the cab's front to release him.

The crash delayed downtown-bound West Side trolley traffic for 30 to 45 minutes.

U. S. FINDS FRAUD IN FOREIGN BUYING

Dummy Concerns Order To Circumvent Blacklist.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 6—Widespread fraud in applications for export licenses to circumvent the policy of blacklisting foreign firms which do business with the axis is being detected almost daily, board of economic warfare officials said today.

Some of the attempted frauds are clumsy and are caught immediately. For example, a drug-store in South America evidently screening a Nazi firm ordered 250 tons of steel I-beams.

Officials reported the blacklist had been so effective in keeping American goods out of enemy hands that foreign concerns acting for enemy powers were now using dummy names or misusing the names of non-blacklisted firms in applying for licenses.

The export control division recently blocked a large shipment of quinine to Mexico. The application was filed in the name of the Mexican government and its validity was suspected because of the size of the order and the fact that Mexico had not been accustomed to buying quinine here.

A line of trucks loaded with small packages of drugs and chemicals for retail stores in Mexico was halted at the border when it was discovered no such stores had ordered the goods.

Many German and Italian orders for South American goods are blocked before the orders are received by the shippers. British mail censor taks care of this in West Indies ports.

The United States to date has forbidden trade with 4,494 firms and individuals in Latin America and 1,894 in Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Turkey because of suspected enemy ties.

BATAAN DRIVE STOPPED AGAIN

U.S. Troops Also Repulse Japs in Effort To Land on Peninsula.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 6 — The war department announced today that American-Filipino forces in Bataan had repulsed another heavy attack on the right center of their line, and frustrated a new attempt by the Japanese to land troops on the east coast of Bataan under cover of darkness.

An assault against the line yesterday was made with great force, a communique reported, with the support of tanks, artillery and dive bombers, but the defenders stopped it after hard fighting. The Japanese were unable to extend the slight gains they had made the day before, the department said, and suffered heavy losses, including a dive bomber shot down by anti-aircraft artillery.

The landing attempt on the east coast of Bataan was halted by light artillery fire from the American-Filipino beach defenses.

Corregidor was free of hostile air raids, but two Japanese dive bombers attacked Forts Frank and Drum, the island fortifications nearest the Cavite shore of Manila bay, but without inflicting either damage or casualties, the communique reported.

The department said a delayed message confirmed dispatches from New Delhi reporting a successful raid by American heavy bombers on the Andaman Islands in the bay of Bengal April 2.

Led by Major General Lewis H. Brereton, commanding American air forces in India, the planes scored direct hits on a Japanese cruiser and a transport, leaving both in flames and observing heavy explosions on them.

Three American planes were damaged slightly, but returned to their base.

INDIA'S DECISION IN BALANCE TODAY

Answer to British Offer Expected Soon.

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, INDIA, April 6—Success or failure for Sir Stafford Cripps' mission to India was believed today to be imminent and dependent on the degree to which Britain would modify her offer of dominion status after the war for Indian's full support in the war now under British direction.

(Some London sources expressed the belief the final outcome of the involved negotiations would come from deliberations today of the British war cabinet on suggested changes in Britain's terms, offered originally on an all-or-nothing basis.

(The core of the difficulty, evidently, was the insistence of Indians, particularly the All-Indin Congress party, that India control her own defenses.

(British souces said the government would consider any responsible suggestion. One possibility, mentioned by the London News Chronicle, was that an Indian would become defense member of the executive council and that general Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander in chief for India, would succeed Lord Linlithgow as viceroy to insure full coordination of all defense measures.)

MacKenzie Tells Junior Why U. S. Must Win War

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

JOHN J. HUNT,
HIGH SCHOOL JUNIOR,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Dear John:

You pay me a very real compliment in wishing to quote my view in your e-say on why America MUST win this war. I am deeply appreciative, and am particularly happy that such an inquiry should come from a high school student, more or less futile, to prove that our boys and girls are doing more than just playing frankly, in these grave days.

As a matter of fact, John, I have been encouraged by much of this grand spirit in traveling about * * *

And so because your query represents what is in the hearts of all our people, both young and grown-up, I am taking the liberty of answering your letter through this column. I hope you won't mind.

In the first place we are fighting for much more than an ideal. To put it bluntly, we are battling for existence for country and liberties. * * *

As this terrible conflict has proceeded, however, it has become clear that we are engaged in a fight to the death with a terroristic gang that is bent on ruling the world by force. * * *

As for our safety because of geographical isolation, the inventive genius of man has destroyed that by wiping out distance. Our United States is vulnerable, John, and don't let any one tell you otherwise * * *

Not long ago Admiral Yamamoto, commander in chief of the Nipponese fleet, declared his ambition to dictate peace terms to us in our own capital. There's not much doubt what that means, is there?

Beyond this grim matter of survival, we are battling for the right to freedom of thought and speech and worship, that is, to "our way of life." This is a privilege denied the unfortunate peoples under axis dictatorship.

That's the sort of thing we are fighting, John. * * * We want our freedom so much that life would be worthless without it. And because such an existence would be meaningless, our people would suffer die fighting than accept it.

With all good wishes,

Yours sincerely,
DEWITT MacKENZIE

EUROPE

significantly advertised by the British in contrast to the reticence of the past. The figure was a close approach to the 400 bombers the Germans marshaled against London at the height of their assaults less than a year ago.

Last night's force was believed to have included scores of mammoth, four-motored Stirlings, each carrying eight tons of bombs.

Out of this armada, it was said, only five planes were lost—"a very satisfactory" ratio.

Masses of German and axis-allied soldiers are clashing with Soviet Russian troops today in the snow and mud of the long, thawing Russian battlefield in heavy fighting apparently preliminary to Adolf Hitler's expected spring offensive.

Nazis Raid Leningrad

The Moscow radio said German planes raided Leningrad Saturday night, the first big raid of Russia's second city in months. Bombs were said to have killed some persons in the city.

The Germans announced yesterday their planes had bombed with heavy explosives two Russian battleships and two heavy cruisers at Leningrad and Kronstadt, Red naval bases.

The German high command claimed that a German thrust on the central front had driven the Russians out of 69 "localities" in the past several days, leaving "hundreds of prisoners and dead."

In the Mediterranean-African zone, only light engagements occurred but in new air attacks on Malta, the Germans reported direct hits on a British light cruiser in dock, a merchant ship and a tanker.

Marion's Easter Parade Biggest in Recent Years

Ideal Weather Brings Out Colorful Crowds; Children's Costumes Bid for Share of Attention.

By HALLIE HOUCK

The most beautiful Easter Sunday weather in years brought out the most colorful parade in years.

Saturday night I worried. Not about my Easter costume which was to be last fall's, but on the march again, but about the weather.

In the afternoon newscasts had said the 1942 Easter business exceeded anything in recent years. One went as far as to estimate it with the business in 1926, peak year. Another said it wasn't a question of business this year, just of having the merchandise on hand to sell. And so much of the business was cash-on-the-line.

With hundreds of residents of Marion and surrounding communities ready and waiting to don their Marion-bought Easter outfits the weather was cause for worry.

Women, men, boys and girls in Berlin, Paris, London, would have gone mad yesterday if they could have dropped down in Marion—or any other city in the United States.

Colorful Sight

Beautiful silks and woolens, a rainbow of colors, lovely corsages, gloves, shoes, and purses of leather, alluring costume jewelry, silk and nylon hosiery, all were on parade.

And the wearers had Easter dinners at home or in the hotel, and restaurants, the like of which haven't been seen in Europe in long, long months, particularly the Nazi-dominated countries. I always think of butter when I think of a bountiful meal.

Tires and cars are being rationed, gasoline rationing is in the offing, but traffic in Marion yesterday was heavy and the roads to the new Scioto Ordnance Plant formed a lively stream of those curious to see "what has been done."

It couldn't have happened in Europe yesterday.

It may not occur next Easter in Marion, but Easter, 1942, was a challenge to those who would offer anything better than the American way of life. After the war there'll be more Easters and Marion will be in the parade—that is a part of the American scene.

Maybe the bright reds and greens were the style note. Or the lovely soft plaids. I saw so many outstanding Easter ensembles that it's difficult to select particular costumes.

Children's Costumes

Most satisfying, most worthy of comment, were those of the misses, ages 2 to 6. Their costumes reflected the trend of their parents, sisters and brothers, even to the military aspect seen among men in uniform with girls on their arms.

This is the first year in more than two decades when uniforms were a part of the Easter parade.

One tot, carrying her mother's large handbag, wore a red cape on which was pinned a corsage of yellow button mums. She drew exclamation marks as she passed in review, totally unaware of the oh's and ah's she was drawing. Another youngster in a round hat of gray, with a matching coat, clutched a calico doll. I fell for a cute little number about size 3 in a tailored navy blue coat and an old-fashioned straw poke-bonnet hat. And then I fell again for a real blonde, about 2½, with genuine curls, a butter-yellow dress and a royal blue coat. She sat so still through a worship service.

Clear-green hat, shoes, gloves and purse were worn by one young woman in a coffee-with-cream dress and light gray top coat and the same shade of green accessories was chosen by another parader whose suit was a brown plaid with a thread of green.

Most Hats Have Veils

Among the brown and beige ensembles was a brown wool tailored jacket and beige skirt, with a beige hat and brown band and veil. Few hats, by the way, that did not boast of a full-fledged veil, a half veil or a bow of veiling. One tiny blue over-on-eye dau'e straw was decorated with a charming nosegay of old-fashioned flowers and a full navy blue veil.

The pastel-plaid suits on parade were a style note, and the accessories in general were in solid pastel hues, with here and there the new redwood shade.

One young lady in a light yellow coat and off-white top coat chose clear green accessories.

There still were those who clung to black, navy and brown, with alleviating touches of white and they were smart looking women. I have a high regard for the dress value of white gloves and white at the throat against a dark costume.

"Miss America" of a few years ago, Miss Marilyn Meseke, topped her Easter costume with a black off-the-face hat swatched in black veiling to set off her blond curls.

No Victory Suits?

Honestly I can't say that I saw any "victory suits" worn by the men—those suits without trouser cuffs and vests, but there must have been some among the many swains on parade.

And on the subject of the Easter parade, I think the proudest outfit was the wool skirt, rose sweater, tailored top-coat and a ready smile of the blond secretary to the commanding army officer of the ordnance plant, with whom we had the good fortune of having dinner at the same table. She had an hour for Easter dinner—the morning hours before and the hours afterward were devoted to the war effort in which Marion is now engaged.

4,000 NEXT DRAFT FIGURE IN COUNTY

Estimate Given as Registration Plans Are Made.

On the basis of estimates given local draft boards by state officials about 4,000 men between the ages of 18 and 65 will register in Marion city and county in the fourth draft on April 25, 26 and 27. Draft board clerks said it appeared likely that between one-third and one-half more than were registered in the third draft would sign up this time.

The Associated Press said today selective service headquarters in Columbus estimate about 700,000 Ohioans will register. Registration figure for the last draft in Ohio was 663,541.

A Presidential proclamation set Monday, April 27, between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. for the fourth registration, but Gov. John W. Bricker added the preceding Saturday and Sunday between noon and 6 p. m. to accommodate any who might find it difficult to sign up Monday.

Except for those in the army or navy, registration is required of all males—citizens or aliens—who reached 18 on or before Feb. 16 and did not attain 65 by April 27, 1942.

Men were urged to register at their own draft boards, but if unable to do so may register at the nearest board and their card will be forwarded to their home area.

PENNEY STORES AT 40TH ANNIVERSARY

Marion One of 1,609 Joining in Celebration.

The J. C. Penney store at 187 West Center street is one of 1,609 store all over the country taking part in the company's anniversary celebration throughout April. The actual anniversary date is April 14 and the company is observing the occasion throughout the month.

Coincidental with the national observance is the Marion store's 22nd anniversary. The original store here was located on South Main street where the new Isaly Dairy store now is. It was opened in April, 1920. In September 1929 the store moved to the present location on West Center street. Cutler A. McGrew, manager, came here in 1934.

The first J. C. Penney store was located at Kemmerer, Wyo. In 40 years the company has grown from one small store of $28,000 annual volume to a group of 1,609 which did over $377,000,000 business in 1941.

Earl C. Sams, president of the company, has been associated with Mr. Penney since his early days in the business. The company's largest store is in Seattle, Wash.

Clark Lee Recalls More Deeds of Heroism by Bataan Defenders

Clark Lee, Associated Press correspondent who chronicled the heroic exploits of General MacArthur's men on Bataan peninsula for more than two months, disclosed for the first time in his dispatch that he himself was injured at the front. Lee, who recently arrived in Australia, characteristically subordinates his own story to that of the men with whom he shared the dangers of war.

By CLARK LEE

MELBOURNE, April 6—Despite all that has been written about the courageous defenders of Bataan peninsula, there still are many tales of individual heroism that never have been told.

There is, for instance, the story of a black night when Capt. Arthur Wermuth was pussyfooting behind the Japanese lines.

He suddenly pumped into about 20 shadowy figures, the first of whom murmured a warning "s-s-s-s-s-h-h-h!"

Wermuth, realizing he had run into a Japanese patrol, replied "s-s-s-s-s-h-h-h!"

Gives Jap a "Gift"

Then he drew a firing pin from a grenade, pressed the missile into the hand of the Japanese, closed the man's fingers and tiptoed away into the darkness with another admonishing "s-s-s-s-s-h-h-h!"

The Japanese opened his fingers a moment or so later, releasing the firing mechanism, and xxxxxx!

Then there is the story of the Filipino scout who fell in behind a Japanese scouting party of 11 men. The Filipino drew out his bolo, lopped off the head of the nearest man and then cut the whole column down one by one from behind.

At Dalao an American sergeant named May of the 31st U. S. infantry made a lone stand against a Japanese warcap attempting to cover a landing party. Equipped with 50-caliber machine-gun mounted on a truck, May mowed down boatload after boatload of Japanese as they came ashore.

The warship finally shot the truck out from under him, but he came back with another and went to work again. It was estimated he accounted for at least 250 Japanese.

Suffers Broken Hand

I have been trying to recall when I had my biggest scare during the campaign in Luzon. Frankly, I was scared every time there was a loud explosion nearby—and that was often.

I probably was lucky to get out with nothing more serious than a broken hand, suffered while diving into a foxhole to escape strafing planes, and a few small scars—the result of being blown off a dock at Corregidor by a shell.

A stick of six bombs which exploded about 50 yards away while I was visiting some marine buddies in their trench at Corregidor also left me with one deaf ear—But it was partly bad before that.

During the first frantic days in Manila after the war started there was considerable indiscriminate shooting in the streets, and Russell Brines, also of The Associated Press, and I had a narrow escape when a sentry fired a shot through the rear door of an automobile in which we were riding.

PELLEY IN JAIL CELL, AWAITS JURY ACTION

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 6—Unable to furnish bond, William Dudley Pelley, chief of the Silver Shirts, remained in the Marion county jail today awaiting grand jury action on an affidavit charging him with sedition in connection with articles published in his magazine, "The Galilean."

The silver-goateed publisher of anti-Semitic magazines said he would plead innocent to any indictments brought against him.

Pelley was unable to obtain his freedom last night although U. S. Marshal Julius Wichser allowed him several hours to post a $15,000 bond before ordering him to jail. Pelley was brought here yesterday from the east after his arrest Satuday in Darien, Conn.

District Attorney B. Howard Caughran, who prepared the complaint against Pelley under the 1917 espionage act, said he had not decided whether to call a special grand jury or to submit it to the regular session in June.

Pelley, told reporters he had published nothing that some columnists and many other persons had not said. He said he had asserted Hitler's program was "Okey for Germany," and that he knew conditions in Germany before Hitler took over.

Farm Group To Appeal Kansas Wheat Decision

CANTON, O., April 6—An appeal to the U. S. supreme court will be filed by the Ohio Marketing Quota Protest association from the decision of a special three-judge court in Topeka, Kas., last week dismissing the association's test case challenging the AAA's 49 per cent penalty tax on excess wheat production. The announcement was made by R. R. Fawcett of Canton, secretary-treasurer of the association.

The suit challenging constitutionality of the department of agriculture's program was dismissed on the grounds that the secretary of agriculture is an indispensable party and is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Topeka court.

Auto Hits House at Silver and Prospect Streets

Police said a car driven by Gilbert McClung, 47, of Marion ran into the home of Mrs. Wesley D. Paige of 308 North Prospect street about 5:30 a. m. Saturday. The accident occurred when Mr. McClung failed to make a turn at North Prospect and Silver streets.

After running into the Paige front yard, the automobile hit the side of the front porch and damaged the northwest side boards of the house and a cement foundation. The right front wheel of the car was knocked off by the accident and the right front fender and head lights were bent.

Mrs. Paige reported a red warning signal, which had been located at the corner, was destroyed some time ago. She said two accidents occurred prior to the erection of the sign, one five years ago and one nine years ago. Both caused considerable damage to the porch, Mrs. Paige said.

AXIS SUFFERS HEAVY LOSS OF AIRPLANES

Three Nations Lose at Least 159 Over Week-End.

By The Associated Press

Germany, Italy and Japan suffered one of their costliest weekends of the air war during the past two days, according to official allied announcements listing at least 159 axis planes shot down or destroyed on the ground, with 51 or more others damaged.

The heaviest toll was taken on the Russian front. The Russians said 102 German planes were shot down or blasted to bits on the ground on Saturday alone, and the Red air force was credited in a communique today with knocking down four more.

Japan took the second heaviest loss-destruction of at least 27 of the 75 planes she hurled against Ceylon Easter morning. The British, who met the raid with a hard-hitting fighter plane and anti-aircraft defense, said five more Japanese planes probably were destroyed, and 25 were damaged.

Twenty more Japanese planes were destroyed and others were damaged in the trading of aerial blows with United States and Australian fighting forces. Of these 11 were destroyed and 14 damaged in United States and Australian raids on Koepang, Dutch Timor, Saturday. Seven were destroyed in Japanese attacks on Darwin and Port Moresby the same day, and two others were shot down near Port Moresby Sunday.

Wide World Food Editor

Having a dessert on hand for an emergency or a regular meal is a big help to most any housewife these busy days.

So I am giving you some spring ideas which can be made up a day in advance. They come at bargain prices, contain little or no sugar and yet will have a distinct flavor-appeal to members of the family or to guests.

Suffolk Dessert: Mix 1-3 cup flour with ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ cup each strained honey and peanut butter. When blended, add 1 egg or 2 yolks and 3 cups milk. Cook in double boiler until thick and creamy. Stir constantly. Pour into glass dish and when cool, set in the refrigerator. This will serve 4 or 5.

Prune Surprise: Dissolve a package of orange gelatin in 1 cup boiling prune juice, add ½ cup orange juice, 3 tablespoons lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cool until a little thick, then mix in 1/3 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup sliced cooked prunes and 1/3 cup slivered almonds or other nuts. Pour into mold. Chill until needed. Unmold and cover with custard sauce, slices oranges or plain or whipped cream.

Ice Box Special: Soak 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin 5 minutes in ¼ cup pineapple juice. Add to 3 egg yolks, which have cooked 3 minutes in double boiler with ¼ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 cup milk. Stir until gelatin dissolves. Cool and let thicken slightly, fold in 3 beaten whites, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind and 1/3 cup currants or raisins. Pour into glass mold, rinsed in cold water.

Store in refrigerator. There are 4 generous servings.

PATRIOTIC PASTRIES

Cherry Pie

3 cups sour canned cherries, drained, ¾ cup honey, 4 tablespoons flour, Juice of 1 lemon, 1 tablespoon butter, pastry for 2 crusts.

Lemon should yield 3 to 4 tablespoons juice; reduce quantity for very sour cherries. Mix all ingredients except butter. Place in 9-inch pie dish, lined with unbaked pastry. Dot butter over cherry mixture. Cover with top crust, or use lattice strips. Bake 45 minutes in a moderately hot oven over 425 degrees F.

Old-Fashioned Soft Cookies, Drop

½ cup shortening, ½ cup sugar, ½ cup molasses, 1 egg, well beaten, 2 cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons cream of tartar, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup milk.

Spice optional: 1 teaspoon cinnamon or ½ teaspoon ginger.

Cream the shortening with the sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in molasses. Add the well-beaten egg and mix well. Sift together the dry ingredients and then stir them into the first mixture, alternately with the milk. Drop from teaspoon on greased cookie sheet. (Spices or ½ cup raisins may be added to batter.)

Bake 8 to 10 minutes in moderate oven 350 degrees F. or until brown around edges. Yields about 4 dozen easy-to-make cookies.

Raisin Pie

1½ cup raisins, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 1 cup orange juice, 4 tablespoons lemon juice, ¾ cup honey, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons cornstarch, ¾ cup cold water. Pastry for 2 crusts.

Look over raisins, place quickly in war water; drain well. Combine with orange rind and juice, lemon juice, honey, butter and salt. Moisten cornstarch in a little cold water and stir into balance of water; continue stirring until well blended. Combine with first mixture, place over low heat and gradually bring to a boil. Cook and stir until mixture thickens, about 4 minutes.

Pour into pastry-lined 9-inch pie dish and cover with top crust. Bake 30 to 35 minutes in a moderately hot oven 425 degrees F. Cool before serving. Serves 6 to 8.

Apple Scallop

3 large tart cooking apples, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ¾ cup granulated sugar, ¾ cup molasses, top milk or hard sauce, ½ cup toasted cake or cookie crumbs (or dry cereal), ½ cup flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 5 tablespoons butter.

Pare and slice the apples. Arrange in a buttered casserole. Pour molasses over top. Dot with 1 tablespoon of butter. Cream the remaining 4 tablespoons butter and add the sugar gradually. Stir in the flour, salt and crumbs. Spread over the apples.

Bake, covered, 30 minues in a moderate oven 350 degrees F. Then remove cover and bake 15 minutes longer. Serve hot with top milk or hard sauce. Serves 4 to 6.

WHY NOT CABBAGE?

In these days of soaring prices, cabbage is one of the few foods that is happily reported lower in cost than at this season last year.

Again comes the timely reminder that cabbage is a wonderful source of vitamin C. Cabbage has been treated as sort of a poor relation for years. Often it has been served only when the budget would not stand for more expensive vegetables. Many balk at eating it because of digestive upheavals; however, this difficulty frequently may be traced to over-cooking. When fresh, shredded cabbage is cooked rapidly in a minimum of water, there should be no after-eating distress. Serve immediately, with plenty of melted butter.

To retain all the valuable vitamin riches, store cabbage in a cool place. Remove at once from paper bag; store it in crisping pan or in a vegetable bag in the refrigerator. Cut cabbage oxidizes quickly; cover the cut surface with waxed paper and use within 24 hours.

Escalloped Cabbage

One tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 2/3 cup cream, 5 cups shredded cabbage, 1 cup buttered crumbs, 1 tablespoon flour, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1/3 cup liquor from cabbage, ½ cup water.

Cook cabbage in the ¾ cup water until partly done. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, salt and pepper, cream and the 1/3 cup liquor from cabbage. Combine sauce and cabbage and pour into buttered casserole. Top with buttered crumbs. Preheat oven.

Bake 20 to 25 minutes in moderately hot oven 425°F.

Mrs. Thurn Not Alarmed About Sugar Rationing

Dear Friends in Marion:

It strikes me that there has been a lot of unnecessary wailing and gnashing of teeth about sugar rationing. People who have been putting two and three heaping teaspoons of sugar into their tea and coffee have been loudest in calling "wolf."

Fruit desserts at one meal follow out the golden rule for health, so that only one menu requires a sweet course. If there are children in the family, plan this at the midday meal.

It is all very well to follow the White House example and serve fruit salads frequently for dessert, but there comes a day when the man in the family balks, puts his foot down and says firmly, "I want pie." Actually, a fruit pie is just as logical and as patriotic as fruit salad. Sugar restrictions need not prevent the pie-loving male from enjoying his favorite desert. If you have not explored the wide range of fruit pies and the various possibilities of sweetening them with little or no sugar, it is high time you went adventuring.

Many Over-Sweeten

As a matter-of-fact, lavish cooks have been inclined to over-sweeten pies and tarts, rather than depending on the flaky pastry for flavor accent. If your pastry is made properly, using pure ingredients, your pie is bound to be a success, even though it "scants" on sugar. Therefore, let your first thought be for the pastry.

As for sweetening, rounding out the available sugar, there are honey, molasses, excellent syrups, dried fruits and the new 1942 run of maple syrup, which the government has been encouraging maple owners to produce in larger quantities than ever before. If you have never tasted maple syrup pie, nutmeg-flavored, and baked between two delicate crusts you can anticipate a real sweet-tooth delight.

The English housewife gets only half a pound of dried fruit—raisins or dates—each month and she is careful to sweeten her apple pie or rice pudding with these instead of sugar. At the beginning of the war, syrups were unrationed in England, but for the last few months they have been included in the jam ration which allows each person one pound of jam, jelly, marmalade, mince meat, syrup or sweet spreads a month. Honey is still unrestricted in England.

One to two tablespoons of marmalade or jam will add flavor and sweetness to many types of fruit pies: they serve also as a topping for puddings and go into baked fruit.

Cherry Pie Aid

After the national pie-baking contest, which is a feature each February of the annual celebration of national cherry week, government foods experts who had been diligently sampling declared that the flavor of cherry pies had been tremendously improved by trimming down on sugar with extra butter added in the filling. Less sugar also means a less "runny" pie.

Sour cherry pie takes to sweetening with honey. The result is a smooth delicious filling. The proportion is three-fourths cup of honey to three cups sour cherries, drained. A recipe is printed on this page. Cocoanut cream pie calls for one-half cup honey.

Raisin pie, flavored with grated orange rind and lemon juice, is sweetened with three-fourths cup honey. Another method for raisin pie calls for one-fourth cup granulated sugar and one-half cup molasses or syrup. This pie is especially popular with the lattice pastry strips over the top.

There are many ways with old-fashioned apple pie, baked between two crusts. Add some raisins, reducing the usual measure of sugar. Use equal parts of sugar and molasses; one-half cup each to four cups sliced apples. Or use one cup honey for sweetening, not forgetting a grating of lemon and one tablespoon butter. Even lemon pie takes to honey: three-fourths cup is sufficient with two lemons, juice and rind.

When it comes to rhubarb pie, remember to add a pinch of salt. That holds good also in stewing it for sauce. And raisins are an excellent addition, both in sauce and in pie.

STEEL INDUSTRY NEAR PEAK OF ACTIVITY

Early Start of Iron Ore Season Helps Boost Output.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, April 6—New production records in pig iron and steel, and opening of the iron ore season at the earliest date ever known forecast probably the greatest activity ever attained by the steel industry, the magazine Steel said today.

"Numerous steelmakers established new high marks in March, among other accomplishments being a daily and monthly blast furnace production figure by a Michigan stack, claimed as a new world record," the trade publication continued.

"The increasing tempo was well under way when the war production board asked acceleration and will provide excellent reports as of April 1, when first production figures were asked. That the records were made in the face of scrap shortages makes them the more impressive. Various factors promise further increase as new equipment and methods now under way produce results."

Steel ingot production edged a half-point higher last week to 98 per cent of estimated national capacity, "the same rate as prevailed a year ago, though the larger capacity now available means greater tonnage than a year ago."

Judge Sees Mob Rule Gaining in America

CLEVELAND, April 4—Declaring "our republic has shown a tendency to grow too democratic," Judge Robert N. Wilkin asserted today: "In our fear of despotism we have inclined toward mob rule."

The federal district judge told Cleveland's City club:

"For three years well-informed men, as for instance our foreign correspondents, have seen the present crisis coming and have had to stand by and see the country rendered almost impotent by the cupidity of mercantilism, the selfishness of isolationism, the sentimentality of pacifism, and the pandering practices of politics.

"Now we stand by and see our finest young men pay a frightful penalty for our unpreparedness."

He attacked as "evil practices" the "tendency of the people to direct governmental action by pressure groups or blocs" and the "tendency of governmental agents to substitute the counting of telegrams and letters for independent investigation, and to substitute polls of public opinion for detached judgment.

NEW SOIL FERTILITY TEST IS DEVISED

Content of Phosphorous Now Quickly Determined.

By The Associated Press

URBANA, Ill., April 6—A new and simple test by which farmers can determine the availability of life-giving phosphorus in soil has been announced by R. H. Bray, associate chief of soil survey analysis at the University of Illinois.

Bray said he and his associates spent more than three years in developing the test. Explaining how it is made, Bray said one part of soil, and seven parts of an ammonium fluoride extracting solution are mixed thoroughly. After the soil has settled, eight drops of an acid molybdate solution is added and stirred with a tin rod. If the soil is high in phosphorus, a deep blue color develops. If it is low, there is no color.

The new test may conserve for war needs thousands of tons of sulphuric acid, used in making commercial fertilizers, by determining where excess superphosphate has been used in the past, Bray said. Extensive areas of such soils are believed to exist in the southeastern states, especially where cotton, tobacco and truck crops have been grown for years with large amounts of commercial fertilizers. The same is true in a considerable portion of the corn belt.

ST. MARY GRIDDERS TO OPEN SPRING PRACTICE TOMORROW

Nick Padgen, Ex-Professional Football Star, To Direct Workouts.

First spring football practice of Marion St. Mary High school will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 on the Aventual lot on North Prospect street, Assistant Coach Jack McAndrew announced today.

For the first time in recent Marion schoolboy athletic annals, the St. Mary crew will take the field virtually without any football rigger. Head Coach Nick Padgen, Creighton university star and a member of the Columbus Bullies professional football team, recently told a reporter that candidates will wear sweat suits and gym suits for workouts.

Before the month-long practice ends the Irish squad will probably don equipment for contact work and a practice game or two.

Skull sessions

During the last two weeks Padgen has conducted school skull sessions at the school as a "warm-up to the real ice fundamental drill to be stressed throughout the early spring drills. Blocking and tackling, rushes, as well as role-defense practice in passing and kicking, will be taken up by Coaches Padgen and McAndrew. Timing and precision of plays will develop gradually with methodical practice, Padgen asserted.

Probably that next fall's Black and White club from team will run out of a modified T-formation and that lineman will find more actual brain work called than strong man assignments is considered a likely occurrence by a majority of the St. Mary following. Padgen started as a line man with the pro-Bullies and the Columbus system developed by Coach Paul Bucklew called for the center to run interference as well as block in the line.

The return of only four letter winners fails to bolster the Irish chances. Those who will be eligible for play next season are Guard Tom Caprino, Tackle Dan Kelly, Backs Don Moran and Francis Tobin.

12 Regulars Lost

Twelve youths, eight of them regulars, will be ineligible for further scholastic football. They are: Capt. Jim Daum, Bob McGinnis, Jim Schafer, George Shoup, Dick Haver, John Robbins, Joe Werley, Tom Dunn, Ed McKinney, Carl Phillips, Tom Simmons, and Dave Rochford.

Two sophomores have been uncovered by the coaching staff and are believed to be of varsity timber. They are Bill O'Neil, a backfield possibility, and Bob Sullivan, a 210 pounder destined for a tackle spot.

Jim Lawler, a slightly built sophomore, has been detailed to fill the shoes of George Shoup, St. Mary's version of a hard-pulling, not-to-be-stopped fullback. Shoup was virtually a one-man team last season, especially in the Springfield Central Catholic game. Danny McGinnis, sophomore basketball sensation, will probably draw the tough assignment of filling in the backfield spot vacated by Jimmy Schafer.

eral of next year's aggregation should come in for serious consideration both for league and state recognition. As in recent years individuals will disregard personal glory on the Williams eleven, lending their talents to team glory instead.

40 Play at Country Club Over Week-End

Bill Schummel, genial Marion Country club pro, reports a turnout of about 40 duffers appeared on his fairways yesterday. A few of those who braved the damp ground played 18 holes, he said. Official opening of the course has been set for Decoration day but the pro shop and course has been opened to accomodate early birds.

The Mar-O-Del layout has not been opened yet, but about 25 golfers appeared yesterday, a majority playing the entire nine-hole route. Knute Minard will again assume managerial duties, it was learned.

Commenting on the shortage of golf balls which has threatened to reduce the number of golf-minded fans in half, Schummel said that the stock of balls he now has on hand in the Country club pro shop is about a third as large as the first order filled a year ago. The scarcity, he said, will necessitate a rationing program this year. Sales will be confined to club members only and even then sales will be restricted to the minimum.

Balls manufactured from a synthetic product will probably arrive here midway in the season, relieving to a great extent present shortages.

Palace Team Beats Upper Sandusky Crew

Palace Recreation bowling team put together games of 976, 959, and 979 for a 2907 total to win three straight games from the Star theater team of Upper Sandusky yesterday at the Palace Recreation center. R. Thomas rolled games of 222, 244, and 212 to capture high honors in both singles and three-games divisions. Al Shull's 223 single game count was second best score turned in. Matteson's 189 effort was tops for the invading Upper Sandusky crew.

Harding High School Gridders Continue Spring Drills.

By LOREN W. TIBBALS
Marion Star Sports Editor

Marion Harding High school's football Presidents prepared today to enter their second week of spring practice and with the first fall game still six months off the championship feeling is steadily taking root.

To say that they face a tough schedule, an uphill fight next season, or any other adaptable phrase, would hardly be sizing up the situation fairly. Really, the 1942 Harding assignment is a man's size job all the way. And that's not stretching the predicament in the least.

For example the proteges of Coaches Bill Williams and George Niemi have last season's miraculous record to keep intact. It might be well to mention a few of the accomplishments of the 1941 crew. Here are just a few:

1. Won undisputed first place in the North Central Ohio conference, trimming four league starts and coming up with a 0-0 tie against Mt. Vernon's Mounties in their only other circuit occasion.

2. Completed the season with their goal line unsullied, a feat which no other Ohio Class A team accomplished last season. A new record in itself, the unscored-on status ranked Harding among the uppercrust of the state schoolboy football circles.

3. As a fitting climax last season, all but one of the regulars won mention on the All-N. C. O. poll and for the first time a Harding substituted slipped into the mythical tanks. As is often the case the brilliant record of the Harding team, plus stellar roles played by its individuals was sorely missed in all-state selections. Two youths—both guards—were awarded all-state berths, both on different squads.

Considering strength of other league teams next season in comparison with that showed by Harding in opening spring workouts, it looks like the circuit schedule will easily develop into a dog fight. Ashland and Mt. Vernon will probably offer the defending champs the most difficulty with emphasis on Ashland. The dramatic unscored on record of last year's which will suffer a major setback by graduation this spring is too much to ask of next year's prospects.

Given only a fair chance several of next year's aggregation should come in for serious consideration both for league and state recognition. As in recent years individuals will disregard personal glory on the Williams eleven, lending their talents to team glory instead.

BIG SPRING, Tex.—Dizzy Sanagan has helped Frankie Frisch, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, to decide on the personnel of his pitching staff by inducting big Bill Clemensen into the army. Other Pirates now in the armed services are Pitchers Curtis Swigart and J. Andre Coppin, Catcher Vince Smith and Shortstop Billy Cox.

GREENVILLE, S. C. — Leading ahead by one day of the regular season, Manager Lou Boudreau says either Jim Bagby or Al Milnar will be the Indians' starting pitcher.

Cleveland opens the season in Detroit on April 15 and plays its first home game April 17. Mel Harder, who has shown improved form this spring after an operation for removal of bone chips from his elbow, will start the first home game unless the weather is too severe.

Softball Teams To Meet Tonight at Y

The annual spring banquet of the Marion Softball commission will be held tonight at 6:30 in the Y. M. C. A. building on South State street. Team managers and players of teams already announcing intentions of joining in league play this summer have been requested to attend as well as others interested in promoting softball teams. Earl N. Hale, executive secretary of the Y. M. C. A., said today that about 15 teams have already completed registration assuring at least two full leagues.

HARRISON LAKE

Harrison Lake, Fulton county, one of the newest of the headwater hatchery lakes to be built by the Ohio Division of Conservation and Natural Resources will be shown on the new stream map now being prepared for distribution by the Division.

The lake is reported to contain 35 varieties of fish besides other wildlife, including muskrats. These animals have been having quite a busy time of it as the lake fills to capacity.

FACTS AND FANCIES

The wily ruffed grouse that the Ohio Conservation Division for the past few years has been restoring in Ohio is still so scarce that only a few sure-shot hunters get them each season. Bill Ackerman, outdoor writer and broadcaster, probably rates top place among grouse hunters of the state last year. He got seven grouse. Do you want to learn how to identify 71 per cent of the 168 kinds of Ohio fishes? If so, just invite one of the men from the Ohio Conservation Division to your club some night and ask him to show you those colored slides which C. I. Wickliff and Walter Lauffer of the Division have made up into a lecture arrangement... Willard Tetlow's dog knows all about porcupines now.... The dog treed the first porcupine to be reported near East Springfield in Jefferson county in years, crawled into the hollow trunk, and emerged with a nose looking like a pin-cushion. Tedrow, a farmer, made a snare on one end of a pole, captured the animal and put the 20-pound creature on exhibition.

American League Clubs Top Senior Circuit Teams in Grapefruit Loop

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 6—Teams are going home from spring training, pitchers are going the route in exhibitions and the fans are going in circles—all of which means that major league baseball is about ready to get going in the pennant races of 1942.

With little more than a week to wait until they start playing for keeps, the teams in the American league are out in front of the National leaguers in exhibition competition today by five game.

Representatives of the junior circuit have triumphed in 55 of the 105 spring training battles involving opponents from the opposite side of the majors.

Equally as important is the fact that five weeks' play in the Grapefruit belt has elevated three clubs in each league as the ones to beat when the chips go down.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers top the senior circuit while the St. Louis Browns, New York Yankees and Washington Senators look like the class of the American league.

The Pirates head the Grapefruit standings, just two percentage points ahead of the Browns, with whom they have been running neck and neck for a couple of weeks.

Pittsburgh has won 17 of its 23 games to date, including 10 out of 13 against American league teams and four out of six in the National league.

The Browns, who own a record of 14 victories and five defeats, have won nine of their 10 inter-league tilts and two out of three against other American leaguers.

More impressive, however, is the record of the Senators, who have played 25 games and won 18 of them.

Third in the Grapefruit standings, the Nats have come up with seven out of 10 against other American league clubs and 10 out of 14 with National entries.

Lou's Worries Are Over

Spell of Vitt, Peckinpaugh Cast Off by Tribesmen Now Under Boudreau.

By The Associated Press

CLEARWATER, Fla. — After having worried himself sleepless most of the winter, Lou Boudreau, the new "boy" manager of the Cleveland Indians has discovered to his obvious astonishment and delight that he didn't have a thing to worry about.

You explain it. The same sullen, hard-bitten crew that made life miserable for Oscar Vitt two seasons ago and which failed to respond to Roger Peckinpaugh last year suddenly has decided to play baseball for a smiling 24-year-old ex-collegian. There is harmony in the Cleveland camp. Roy Weatherly is in probably the best shape of his career and is full of vim. The tough part is that it has come too late.

"It's the greatest thrill I've ever had," says Boudreau, who will be the youngest regular in his team's line-up. "I didn't know how some of the fellows would like taking orders from me. I'll admit I worried plenty. Anyone would have in my position. And then we got here and started training and every worry disappeared. They are hustling so hard for me that I scarcely know how to express my appreciation. I still don't quite understand it, but it's great."

It is unfortunate the same spirit didn't prevail in either of the last two years, when the Indians appeared to have everything except the will to win. Bobby Feller, greatest of present day pitchers, is in the service; Hal Trosky, slugging first baseman, is on the temporary retired list; "Gee" Walker, star right-fielder, is running his drug store at Orlando, Fla., and apparently is deadly serious about refusing to accept a salary cut. Instead of a pennant contender, Cleveland is just another ball club.

"I'm setting my sights for fourth place," Boudreau said. "If we finish that high I'll be satisfied. I can't see much hope of breaking into the first three against the Yankees, the Red Sox and the White Sox."

With Feller gone, the Indians' staff consists, broadly speaking, of a couple of left-handers named Al—Al Smith and Al Milnar—and a hope for the best. That hardly seems sufficient.

Sticklers for accuracy might claim that the club is more short on catchers than anything else since Rollie Hemsley was sold to Cincinnati but they would be splitting hairs. Gene Desautels, who hit .201 in 66 games last year, still remains, and there is a rookie from Minneapolis named Otto Denning.

Tough Infield

The team has one of the better infields, with Boudreau, himself, at short, Ken Keltner on third, Ray Mack at second and a robust 190-pound newcomer named Les Fleming, up from Nashville, taking Trosky's job at first. Fleming looks like the works at bat. He hit .414 for Nashville last year and drove in 103 runs. Disquieting point is that the Indians also have a couple of rookie outfielders from Nashville named Oris Hockett and Charles Workman who clouted .359 and .334, respectively. That is an awful lot of hitting on one club.

Jeff Heath, whose great feat of hitting .340 and driving across 123 runs generally was unappreciated, is back in left field, and Weatherly looks set for a good year in center. The third job, if Walker doesn't report, probably belongs to Henry Edwards, a six-foot, 190-pound rookie who blasted the ball at a .364 rate last season for Cedar Rapids.

NEW YORK, April 6 — Why wouldn't it be logical to stage next summer's heavyweight title between Private Joe Louis and Private Billy Conn at Soldier Field Chicago". KENTON MAN SENT TO LIMA HOSPITAL

Raver Committed by Judge in Slaying Case.

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., April 6 — Francis Edward (Eddie) Raver, 23, today was conveyed to the state hospital, for the criminally insane at Lima by Sheriff Randall R. Clark. In case he is declared sane, he will go free in the slaying of his wife, Reva, also 23, in their Kenton apartment last Jan. 26.

Judge Arthur D. Tudor, at conclusion of the three-day period permitted for filing motions for a new trial, formally committed the youth to the state hospital "until dismissed according to law."

The youth, who had the sympathy of the public from the start of the trial because of domestic difficulties, had admitted shooting his wife in the back as she prepared his breakfast but said he didn't know what he had done until he saw her fall to the floor. "She died in my arms", he told the court while wiping tears from his eyes.

This dramatic scene preceded testimony by five experts, four of whom testified that Raver was sane when they examined him and, in their belief, was sane at the time of the crime. Some of the jurors and many spectators cried with the youth and, when the verdict was returned after nearly nine hours of deliberation, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty, "on the grounds the defendant was insane at time of the crime".

Attorneys say that after a brief observation period, Raver may demand a writ of habeas corpus, and receive an immediate hearing before the district appeals court in Lima. During the trial here, Dr. R. E. Bushong, superintendent of the Lima hospital, and E. H. Crawfis, a member of the staff, had testified that Raver was sane.

It was considered probable that the young man, whose trial cost Hardin county nearly $3,100, will return to Carroll, O., upon his release.

Mrs. George Roberts was in charge of a program on foreign missions. The society president, Mrs. George Darling, assisted the hostess in serving lunch.

largest attendance in several years.

Several persons have suggested that the sunrise service at the memorial be made a citywide affair, with all churches participating, taking the place of sunrise services in the various churches, Earl N. Hale, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. said this morning. He said the suggestion would be placed before the pastors for their consideration.

Rev. J. B. Holloway of Trinity Baptist church spoke yesterday at the memorial, taking as his subject, "The Dawn of a New Day."

After picturing the Crucifixion and the darkness afterward, which he termed "symbolic of the deeper spiritual darkness into which the world was plunged because the Son of Righteousness was being hanged on a cross and the 'Light of the World' was being put out," Rev. Holloway said "We are passing through dark days, when the whole social order is out of joint, there are violent upheaval of wars, political corruption, economic distress and a moral let-down.

"We are witnessing a decadent era, an era of imperialism, and exploitation, an era filled with race hatred and barbarism. There are seers among us who dip into the future and are daring to predict that a new era of international consciousness is about to dawn, a new social order wherein dwelleth righteousness. . . . Easter day should bring a glad day for all, but alas! it is just another day for many. It is a sad day for many who are inclined to believe the false story of the soldiers (at the Resurrection) rather than the testimony of many witnesses that He arose. It can and will be the happiest day of a person's life if he will only believe the Easter story and let Him come into his heart to stay."

There were sunrise services in many churches and at Epworth Methodist church men of Marion Commandery No. 36, Knights Templar, attended a sunrise communion service.

The Associated Press reported everywhere there was a pronounced lack of gaiety as the nation observed the first wartime Easter in 24 years. Replacing the celebration was the audible note of the war plants turning out guns, tanks and planes.

Although some of the glitter and glamour were gone, New York police estimated half a million persons thronged Fifth avenue, the largest crowd to parade on Easter in 20 years.

Along the west coast, army restrictions prevented the usual crowds from gathering near the ocean, and in Miami, sunrise services were held inland in fear of possible submarines lurking offshore. But in Detroit and many other manufacturing centers, factories continued to turn out munitions.

STOCKS MAKE SMALL GAINS

Market Moves To Cancel Part of Declines Checked Up in March.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 6 — The stock market today took another small and timid step toward cancelling some of the March declines.

Improvement followed more active bidding for steels, motors and certain of the blue chips. Gains running to a point or so were well spread over the list near the fourth hour.

It was the consensus of market analysts that the mild upturn was based mostly on buying in the hopes of a turn after a long downward drift.

Among stocks showing moderate climbing power were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, American Telephone, Goodrich and Woolworth.

Associated with the rising belief in speculative quarters that the market's technical position was on a relatively good foundation was the stock exchange's monthly compilation disclosing the March decline had chipped around $2,200,000,000 from the value of listed shares.

MARION WORKMAN SUFFERS EYE INJURY

Herbert Reinwald in Hospital After Factory Mishap.

Herbert Reinwald, 21, of 141 Blaine avenue, suffered an injury to his left eyelid in an accident about 8:6 p. m. today in the blacksmith shop at the Marion Steam Shovel Co.

The physician who attended him at City hospital, where he was taken in the L. A. Axe & Son ambulance, said the upper eyelid was badly torn but "all evidence is that the vision is not affected." He said Reinwald's general condition is good.

Contrary to company rules, a hook hanger used on chains for hoisting was not returned to its place after it was used, according to a company report. Reinwald, walking between the furnace and a coke mixing box, caught his left eyelid on the hook.

Sees Industry Willing To Forego All Profits

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 6 — Industry would be willing to forego wartime profits from the government in the great majority of cases provided it was assured protection against capital impairment, Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the war production board believes.

"I think the majority of industry, if I interpret it rightfully, would be, if all things were equal, willing to work for nothing for the government in this war period, provided there was no capital impairment during this time," Nelson told the senate appropriations committee in testimony made public today.

WHEAT RECOVERS PART OF DECLINE

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 6 — After tumbling almost 2 cents early in the session to the lowest prices quoted here since last December, wheat futures rallied today and recovered the loss.

Renewed selling, similar to that which has lowered wheat about 8 cents the past three weeks, was attributed largely to the favorable new crop situation, which promised a large 1942 harvest to compensate the already crowded domestic grain acreage situation. The recovery was stimulated by short covering, prospects of reduced redemption of 1941 wheat now under loan and some buying attributed to mills, although this support was limited. Strength of feeding grains also was a factor.

YOUR HEALTH

Dyspepsia

DYSPEPSIA may be defined in a broad way as any disturbance of the digestion.

Digestion starts in the mouth, depends on good teeth, then depends on the swallowing power of the esophagus, and then is continued in the stomach and then continued in the intestines with the help of the pancreas and its juices and the liver and the bile and then depends on the action of thirty or more feet of large and small intestine. All of these processes may be attacked by infection or mechanical derangements, especially by emotional disturbances or interferences of the mind, so it is not surprising that dyspepsia is quite common and that it requires a good deal of unraveling to make a good diagnosis.

Consider one thing: the liver and the bile ducts. When surgeons began to operate on this part of the anatomy, which was about the early 90's of the last century, they immediately announced to the medical world, on the basis of their operative experience, that a great many cases of chronic dyspepsia that had been so treated for many years were relieved when gall stones were removed or when the gall bladder was drained or removed.

Nor is it surprising that these conditions should be very common. The anatomy of the body is so arranged that all of the material absorbed from the intestines goes up through the portal vein to the liver. So since a great deal of this material is poisonous, one of the chief functions of the liver is that of detoxification.

It really stands as a guardian for the rest of the body and empties that material which comes from the intestines of its poisonous qualities. It is not surprising that occasionally it is not up to the job and some of the poison gets past it and causes some trouble in doing so.

Also, since the intestines are constantly filled with germs of all kinds, it is not surprising that a great deal of the material that reaches the liver by way of the portal vein should be loaded with germs. These the liver discharges into the bile and all too often they arrive in the gall bladder and set up an inflammation of the walls of this organ.

Thus we have the formation of gall stones. A germ lies on the wall of the gall bladder and the gall bladder secretes a mucous to surround the germ and this acts as a foreign body on which the salts of the gall bladder are deposited. If you see a picture of a gall stone cut across the middle, it shows rings like the rings of the tree, which mark the successive deposits of layers of these bile salts.

After the stones have formed, they can raise all kinds of trouble, making a person uncomfortable in the region of the stomach with gas, flatulence, nausea and actual gall stone colic. Thus we see that the various normal functions of the digestive tract may be turned awry and these upsets lead to one form or another of the common symptom, dyspepsia.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

After Blowing Police Whistle To Summon Gus, Madge Shoots the Fake Prof. Diswell in the Wrist.

THERE was something so deadly in the advance toward me of the man masquerading as Professor Walter Scott Diswell, that I knew I no longer could delay my defense against him.

His smile, his placating suggestion of my having a cup of tea, were more terrifying than the rage which showed in his face and eyes when he rushed back into the living room.

Cautiously I backed toward the door, and as I did so I brought my hand away from the folds of my skirt and aimed my little silencer pistol at him.

Vividly before me was the memory of my humiliating experience when the young gangster on the train took my pistol from me before I had a chance to use it. I did not mean to make that mistake again, and instead of warning the pseudo professor to stop where he was, I fired in the same instant that I took aim.

Effect of Madge's Shot

The bullet struck his wrist, and the look of utter astonishment on his face, as he caught it in his other hand and stopped short in his measured advance upon me, would have been mirth-provoking if I had had time or breath to indulge my risibles.

"That was not a piece of luck," I told him icily. "I really am considered to have accurate aim, and I must warn you that if you come a step nearer, my next shot will do you more harm than this one."

He snapped out of astonishment and into cajolery as the device easiest to use.

"This has been too much for you, my dear," he said. "I am very sorry that dog and the mysterious whistle excited you so. And I forgive you for shooting me, for I know you could not have meant it.

"But, dear child," he went on after a quick pause for breath, "do you not realize that I am your old friend and Jack's, and that not for worlds would I harm you?"

I saw him edging almost perceptibly nearer and thrust the pistol to a position a fraction of an inch higher.

"Don't take a single step forward!" I warned, then knew I could no longer delay telling him of my discovery concerning him. I had listened to his rambling speech only for the purpose of keeping him where he was until Gus and the men outside, waiting for the sound of the whistle, could come to my aid.

Of one thing I was sure, knowing the efficiency and resourcefulness of Gus. Before he did anything else he would make sure that the pretended gardener outside got no chance to enter the house.

However, I had heard no sound of either shot or whistle from outside, and for an instant I speculated frantically upon the possibility that Gus might have been overpowered.

But I smothered my incipient panic and spoke measuredly to the man opposite me, whose ashen color I knew was not due wholly to controlled rage, but partly to the agony which he must be suffering because of his wounded wrist.

"You would be wiser to give up this game without any further pretense," I said. "I am perfectly aware that you are not Professor Diswell, but an impostor, and that the old professor lies gagged in the next room."

Calls Madge Insane

I was watching his eyes as I spoke, and I knew that I had astounded him again. But in an instant he had replaced his mask.

"I see it all now," he said. "I thought the sounds of the dog and the whistle had turned your brain. Now I see that you were insane, suffering from a delusion, when you came in here."

His voice changed then in tone from soothing monotone to a raucous command.

"Drop that gun, you fool, this instant!" he shouted.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, April 7

THE ASTRAL auguries for this day are rather conflicting and complicated, indicating that sagacity, vigilance, persistency and good grace may turn very definite obstacles, oppositions and duplicity into prolific and profitable channels. These sound qualities should be supported by quickened intuitions, imagination and subtle leadings which are to be found dependable and wise. Antagonism may come from elders, strangers or regular business associates.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of a year of splendid progress and opportunity, but such must be safeguarded by finesse, diplomacy, keen understanding, as well as intuition and inner guidance. The psychic and intellectual qualities are under great stimuli, to be used with sagacity and sound logic. Antagonism from relatives elders or strangers should be shrewdly placated.

A child born on this day may be endowed with splendid talents for success and high station in life, although this be beset by treachery or antagonism.
